EXCLUSIVE! PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S OWN STORY OF NEW DEAL

New York Origin Of Policies Told

Today, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, with whom the making of precedent has almost become a custom, makes history by reviewing his own acts while still an occupant of the White House. He presents a behind-the-scenes analysis of the New Deal by the man who made it.

Many of the objectives and policies of my administration as President had their origin during my term as governor of New York.

The maintenance of the processes of democracy and the promotion of the ideal of social justice are, in general, the ends which I sought as governor with the same consistency as I did during my term as President.

It must be borne in mind, of course, that the field of activity of state government is very limited as compared with the federal government.

In relief to agriculture, in protection of labor, in regulation of utilities, in attainment of economic security, in protection of investors and bank depositors—in all these and in all our other efforts to bring about a broader social justice, the extent of the action which can be taken by any state is, of course, circumscribed by the physical boundaries of the state and by the action or lack of action by sister states.

There are certain other restraining features which must be taken into consideration by the legislature and governor of a state in formulating a program of social legislation.

Restrictions cannot be placed upon business and industry and finance in any single state which will place them at an undue disadvantage with competing business and industry and finance in neighboring states.

Of course, the caution with respect to this feature cap at times be carried to unnecessary extremes.

In fact, opponents of reform have rushed forward on nearly every occasion to urge that the slightest departure from laissez-faire would cause business and industry to leave their State and go elsewhere.

I have always had considerable doubt that any large number of reputable business men actually have moved their plants out of the state of New York because of the advanced social legislation of that state.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT at his desk in the White House. He tells us: "Growth and expansion were promised in the Democratic national platform of 1932. They were promised during the campaign of 1932. They were approved by the election of 1932. They were started on March 4, 1933."

But there have been some who have sought to exploit the cheaper labor of other regions and obtain an advantage over their New York competitors in terms of human misery.

It is also true that some products made in some other states, under sweat-shop conditions, have come into competition with products made under more enlightened conditions in New York state. This situation has often been exaggerated and has been frequently urged as an argument for blocking action to remove even the most glaring social inequalities.

The effects of this type of competition, however, must always be considered in adopting any plan for social reform which is restricted to any individual state.

Results of Legislation Hang on Many Factors

Good results from social legislation in any one state cannot be obtained to the same degree when confined to that state as when it is made nationwide.

For example, I am convinced that the federal legislation which I have been recommending for more than a year, to fix a minimum wage and a maximum number of hours with some degree of uniformity throughout the nation, will help business, industry and agriculture as much as it will help underpaid workers. It will furnish to many millions of people greater purchasing power with which more products of our factories and our farms may be bought.

It will serve directly to stimulate greater production and sales in our factories and on our farms.

But if a similar statute were passed for any single state,

TVA 'Probe' Handed to Congress

WASHINGTON, March 23 (INS) — President Roosevelt dumped the TVA controversy into the lap of Congress today—and both houses leaped upon it in angry debate, preparatory to voting an investigation later.

The President sent a special message to Congress, advising that he had summarily removed Chairman Arthur E. Morgan for "contumacious" conduct and "obstructionist" tactics. Accompanying the message was a full transcript of the voluminous White House hearings, and an opinion by Solicitor-General Jackson that the President was within his power in removing the recalcitrant chairman.

The message was heard in silence, but at its conclusion there was scattered applause in the House.

PROBE OPPOSITION FADES

All opposition to a thorough-going Congressional investigation into the government's big power project disappeared in the wake of the message. It remained only a question whether the Senate would do it alone, or whether there would be a joint committee of House and Senate. Administration leaders favor a joint committee.

In the Senate there was warm debate between Senator Barkley (D.) of Kentucky, majority leader, Senator Bridges (R.) of New Hampshire, and others.

In the House, Representative

VATICAN CITY, March 23 (INS)—Appalled by the non-combatant loss of life in war-torn Spain, Pope Pius today sent an urgent appeal to Generalissimo Francisco Franco to "reduce as much as possible the horrors of war."

The appeal was disclosed a short time after the British and French governments had invoked Vatican aid in putting an end to aerial bombardments of undefended towns.

Pope Pius, the editorial said, has instructed Papal Nuncio Antoniutti to make urgent representations to General Franco to mitigate bombing activities. The editorial was headed, "Regarding Aerial Bombardment."

Osservatore revealed that orders originally issued to the Papal Nuncio were reiterated on March 21. The newspaper declared the Vatican's action was independent of action by foreign powers.

Franco Osservatore declared, has transmitted "reassuring explanations" regarding aerial bombardments. He has demonstrated himself "highly sensitive to the fate of innocent victims," the Vatican newspaper declared.

Osservatore also accused Communists of massacreing 27 priests

President Raps 'Feudal System'

No Recovery Ever, He Declares, If U. S. Returns to Rule of 1921-1933

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

GAINESVILLE, Ga., March 23—Here in the deep South where has come the strongest opposition to his national wage and hour proposals, President Roosevelt today boldly attacked advocates of "a feudal system" which he denounced as akin to Fascism.

"Today, national progress and national prosperity are being held back chiefly because of selfishness on the part of a few," the President warned as he stood in Roosevelt Square, dedicated to him by Gainesville in appreciation of his help in reconstructing the town, following the 1936 tornado.

Twenty thousand persons from all sections of Georgia cheered as Gov. Rivers asserted that "Georgia is behind President Roosevelt 100 per cent."

Senator Walter F. George introduced the chief executive.

A threat of rain and heavily overcast skies, slightly reminiscent of the fateful April 6, 1936, when Gainesville was leveled and hundreds killed by a tornado, prevailed as Roosevelt declared:

"This nation will never permanently get on the road to recovery if we leave the methods and the processes of recovery to those who owned the government of the United States from 1921 to 1933."

"Georgia and the lower south may just as well face facts — simple facts presented in the lower south by the President of the United States.

WAGES TOO LOW

Complete Text of President Roosevelt's Speech on Page 8.

"On the present scale of buying power, the south cannot and will not succeed in establishing successful new industries.

"Efficiency in operating industries goes hand in hand with good pay and the industries of the south can not compete with industries in other parts of the country, the north, the middle west and the far west, unless the buying power of the south makes possible the highest kind of efficiency.

LIKE FASCIST SYSTEM

"When you come down to it, there is little difference between the feudal system and the Fascist system. If you believe in one, you believe in the other."

Mr. Roosevelt returned to his old argument with the "economic royalists"—inferring they also are feudal barons—with full force. He highlighted the social objectives of his New Deal and asserted:

"To those in and out of public office, who still believe in the feudal system—and believe in it honestly—the people of the United States and in every section of the United States are going to say, 'We are sorry, but we want people to represent us whose ethics are cast in the 1938 mould and not in the 1838 mould.'"

Vote Due Soon in Senate

By ALFRED D. WHELTON

At least two Washington special agents are in Boston investigating charges that "political favoritism" was connected with appointments to the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, it was learned today.

This new development was disclosed as a legislative order for investigation of "job giving" at the unemployment compensation offices, most of which has been urged by Governor Hurley's office, was pushed toward the Senate for approval.

Before the Senate convened, Senator Edward C. Carroll, Democrat of South Boston, announced he would propose an amendment to the order calling for an investigation of all appointments to state positions over a period of 15 years.

The primary work of the Washington investigators is to determine whether the law, which set up state offices under the Social Security-unemployment legislation, has been violated.

BLOW TO HURLEY

The law specifically states that all employes of the commission shall be selected in accordance with Chapter 31 of the General Laws (Civil Service) and that no person who is a member of any political party organization or committee shall be employed.

Woman Warns Bill Means 'Hoarding'

Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINTON, March 23—Women will withdraw their investments in corporation securities and return to "sugar-bowl hoarding" if Congress approves the Borah-O'Mahoney bill to license interstate corporations, Cathrine Curtis of New York, national director of Women Investors in America, Inc., warned today.

Testifying before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, Miss Curtis, who said she represented thousands of women investors, asserted:

"Pass this legislation and I believe the women investors of the nation will demand the return of their capital investments in corporate securities, which will be affected by this measure, and once more they will return to the old days of 'sugar bowl' hoarding."

She described the measure as "another step to destroy the capitalistic system," and proposed the following for business recovery:

"1—Let Congress halt its investigation of the acts of industry and investigate its own acts which have been harmful to industry.

"2—Declare a moratorium on all legislation harmful to industry."

She was joined by Edward Clark, Texas secretary of state, in condemning the measure. He said:

"This drastic legislation should not be enacted. I feel it is certain to plunge business into chaos.

"It will cause a period of uncertainty which will result from endless litigation; it will strike fear into the hearts of those engaged in production, mining, manufacturing and all other local business.

"It will retard recovery and force men out of employment."

Miss Curtis recalled her appearance before the Senate judiciary committee last year seeking defeat of the Supreme Court enlargement bill. She said:

"In the case of the Supreme Court issue, it was the principle of an independent judiciary. In this case of the federal licensing of corporations, it involves a principle which we believe to be even more basic and far-reaching—namely the principle of individual ownership, of basic property rights.

"As the largest group of capitalists in the country we look to you to withdraw this federal licensing bill and to devote your time and energies to a constructive program that will bring us out of our present regression while preserving for us the fundamental system of private enterprise provided for in our Constitution."

Witness Again Defies Lobby Probers

Dr. Rumely Ignores New Subpoena to Produce Records

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—Dr. Edward A. Rumely refused again today upon service of a new subpoena to produce records of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government for scrutiny by the Senate lobby committee.

Committee representatives served a new subpoena on Rumely, executive secretary of the committee calling for letters written by Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher and sponsor of the organization to Rumely and Glen Hancock, assistant secretary.

The subpoena called for letters written on specific dates in May and June, 1937, which might "influence, encourage, promote or retard legislation." This was during the Senate's fight over President Roosevelt's plan to reorganize the Supreme Court.

The subpoena also asked for records on the committee's efforts to "control, directly or indirectly, the sources or mediums of information."

"You refuse to produce those letters in obedience to this subpoena?" asked Chairman Minton (D.) of Indiana.

"Absolutely," Rumely replied.

He said every reply to requests for records in what he termed a "fishing expedition" would be the same.

Rumely, called by the Senate committee last week for an investigation of the committee's activities in opposition to the reorganization bill pending in the Senate, refused then to produce records demanded by the committee's first subpoena.

His speech was broadcast over the Mutual Network from Station WOR.

Quit Spending, Says Borah, to Lift U. S. Industry's Heavy Tax Burden

Walsh Answers 'Yes' To Hearst Question

What are most important moves necessary in a fight for economic recovery in the United States? Here is another article in a vital series in which leaders of the nation give their views in response to a questionnaire.

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, March 23—The question of taxation will engage the attention of this session of Congress until adjournment.

It seems likely, at this time, that there will be a prolonged debate in the Senate on the revenue measure the finance committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Harrison of Mississippi, is considering.

There are differences between the bill as being drawn at the Senate, and that which has passed the House, which may lead to bitter controversy in committee, with President Roosevelt playing a leading role.

This problem is dealt with in the third question of the list of 12 prepared by Mr. William R. Hearst, and submitted to the consideration of members of Senate and House, in an effort to ascertain an accurate cross-section of congressional opinion on the nation's two problems. The answers drawn by Mr. Hearst this question reads:

"Do you think American industry is over-burdened with taxation?"

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, veteran sage on the Republican side of the Senate, has replied to that question with the biting cynicism in which so often he expresses the thoughts of a penetrating mind.

HIGH TAXES CITED

Replying to the third of Mr. Hearst's questions, Senator Borah said:

"Yes, but what are you going to do about it, as money is expended? There is only one way to reduce—quit spending!"

The analysis being conducted here discloses the majority of a substantial cross-section of both Senate and House membership believe that American industry is over-burdened by taxes.

But the expression is no longer nearly unanimous, as it has been on Questions 1 and 2.

And Senator Borah thus far is the only member of either branch of Congress to drive straight to the point and confront taxation directly with expenditure.

Taxation is painful—spending delightful. Parenchimatic is always an excellent thing—for some other state, and in the next congressional district. This is what happens to such a fine point the Idaho statesman's symbolic query—"What are you going to do about it?"

Since a majority of Senators and members who have replied to Mr. Hearst's questionnaire have said—some with qualifications—that they believe American industry to be overburdened with taxation, let us examine a few of the replies of a contrary character, or qualified by as.

HULBLEY OPINIONS

Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, a Democrat who is coming up for election this year, makes this analysis of Questions 3 and 4, taken together:

"These questions are evidently intended to imply that high wages and high taxes make it impossible for American industry to compete with foreign industry. This is a fallacy for the following reasons.

(A) Foreign industry is, on the whole, taxed more heavily than American industry.

(B) Higher wages do not necessarily mean higher costs of production. American labor generally commands higher rates than foreign labor because it is more productive. Typically high-wage American industries, such as the automobile industry, are able to hold their own in competition with foreign products not only in domestic markets, but even in foreign markets where the American product is handicapped by high tariffs."

Senator John E. Miller, of Arkansas, a Democrat new to the senate, replies to the following reasons,

"I believe that in some respects American industry is overburdened by taxation, but not as much as some may contend."

TAX TYPE COUNTS

Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, says:

"As to question 3, it is not so much the amount of the tax as it is the character of the tax which in some important cases prevents expansion and credit and results in a proportionate reduction in national income."

In the replies received from the Senate, only two senators, Morris Sheppard, of Texas, and Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, both Democrats, have thus far replied with a great big "No" to Question No. 3.

Question No. 4 which No. 3 was answered in the negative by Representatives Henry G. Teigan, of Minnesota, Peter Demuth, of Pennsylvania, and Lawrence J. Connery, of Massachusetts, all Democrats.

Representative Caldwell, of Florida, also a Democrat, said he did not believe that industry was "greatly over-burdened" by taxation, Representative Phillips, Democrat, of Connecticut, does not believe it is overburdened, but thought that "taxes might be changed in certain particulars." Representative Sam Hobbs another Democrat, of Alabama, replied:

"Not so much from a standpoint of dollars as from the number of taxes and required reporting, which often necessitates changing accounting systems and the employment of extra bookkeepers or accountants."

RELIEF NEEDED

Representative Mead, of New York, also a Democrat, replied:

"No; not big industry. Relief for small enterprise is needed."

Representative Binderup, Democrat of Nebraska, said:

"Any tax might be claimed to be over-taxed and there is no doubt but that there are injustices in our tax structure, but we had recessions and depressions under high taxes and under low taxes."

But what a different picture is presented. In Both Senate and House, when we examine the other side.

In both branches the overwhelming majority of those who have submitted replies in this survey are of the opinion that American industry most emphatically IS overburdened by taxation, and especially in the Senate. This is important, in view of the fact that a very radical tax revision bill almost certainly will be presented in the Senate for its consideration by the finance committee.

Senator Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa, Democrat, coming up for re-election, said:

"To your question No. 3 as to whether I feel American industry is overburdened with taxation, I can scarcely answer with a definite 'yes.'

COMPLICATIONS SEEN

"But I am of the opinion that industry could carry a heavy burden of taxation easily if the taxing field could be cleared of its complications by the various taxing agencies, and, above all, if the legislation could be revised and simplified so that the taxpayer could know in a readily understandable way just what burden of tax he would be required to pay, without the worries, expenses and misinterpretation so often found in the levy and collection of the charges."

Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts is very emphatically of the opinion that industry bears far too great a tax load.

Senator Charles O. Andrews (D.) of Florida expressed it this way:

"If you could relieve 50 per cent of all incomes from corporate taxes and capital gains taxes, and place a reasonable graduated tax on the remainder, there would be possible a great improvement in the economic situation in a very short time. It would help labor and capital immediately."

"I am in sympathy with Senator Harrison's tax program."

Democratic Senator Holt of West Virginia "very decidedly" of the opinion that industry cannot continue to bear its present tax load."

TAXES TOO HIGH

Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, believes the tax burden to be excessive and oppressive "in many cases."

As Senator Arthur Capper expresses it:

Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, a Republican, said:

"Industry is burdened with restrictive forms of taxation. The money collected does not begin as much as the way in which it is collected. The small business man is positively afflicted with an endless number of reports he must make to the government. He lacks clerical facilities for this."

Senator Francis T. Maloney, Democrat, of Connecticut, said:

"I want to see the surplus profits tax modified."

Members had obviously so completely made up their minds on this point, that many of them marked this question "Yes," without feeling the necessity for comment.

Some of those who made more extended comment follow:

Representative Gearhart, Republican, California:

Representative Rich, Republican, Pennsylvania:

"Yes; the undistributed profits tax is the greatest burden of all. It will wreck completely the business concerns of the country if they continue it. Then hit another panic."

James W. Wadsworth, Republican, New York:

Alfred F. Bieter, Democrat, New York:

"I think inequities in the present law should be corrected and that undoubtedly modification of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes would encourage expansion and development, and result in stimulated business activity."

Representative Fred Biermann, Democrat, Iowa:

"Yes—as are most people. And the taxes aren't all national, either."

Representative Hart, Democrat, New Jersey:

"Not perhaps as to the amount of taxes paid, but as to the kind of taxes levied and the uncertainty as to when and how more shall be assessed."

Representative Earl C. Michener, Republican, Michigan:

"Yes; without any doubt."

Members of the House replying simply "yes" to this question in one form or another complete a cross-section of the country which indicates widespread apprehension over the tax burden now resting upon industry.

Questions for Members Of Congress to Answer

THE following are the 12 vital questions affecting the economic recovery of the United States, submitted to the members of the Senate and House of Representatives by the Hearst newspapers, for their analysis and opinions:

1—As a factor in dispelling depression, how do you value American industry and its capital to employ labor and produce national wealth?

2—Do you think industry should be encouraged to expand and take American workers off the charity list of the dole?

3—Do you think American industry in over-burdened with taxation?

4—Do you think American industry can pay high taxes and also pay higher wages and also produce at low prices to compete with foreign products?

5—Do you believe in tariff protection of American industry and labor?

6—Do you believe in free trade?

7—Do you think that reciprocal tariff concessions entered into with one nation should be automatically extended to practically all nations under most favored nations principle?

8—Will that policy eventually result in opening American markets to practically all foreign products?

9—Do you think American markets should be mainly preserved for American industry and the American employees of industry?

10—How do you account for the continual decline in American exports and the continual increase in American imports?

11—Do you think that closed factories and jobless workers are all connected with the invasion of American markets by cheap foreign products?

12—How can we change depression or recession into prosperity?

Angry Debate Opens In Both Branches After Message

McLean got the floor as soon as the message was read, and made a bitter attack on the whole TVA setup. The chief difficulty with TVA, he asserted, was that "it has abrogated to itself all the powers of Congress—disregarded the law, and failed to let the people know what is going on."

NO O K ON PROBE

The President neither endorsed nor opposed an inquiry by Congress into the whole TVA. On that point, apparently realizing that a congressional investigation is inevitable, Roosevelt simply said:

"It is clearly the right of Congress to undertake at any time any fair inquiry into the administration of the Tennessee Valley Authority or its policies which the Congress may deem in the public interest. But I cannot in the meantime abdicate my constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

On the face of the record, as adduced in the White House "trial," the President said he was forced to find that (1) Chairman Morgan refused to substantiate the grave and libelous charges which he made against the three directors, Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal; (2) charges that they obstructed and destructed the work of the TVA had been substantiated by proof; and (3) therefore, Chairman Morgan was guilty of contumacious conduct, justifying his removal.

NO OBJECTION

Pointing out that Chairman Morgan had repeatedly asserted he would answer questions only to a congressional committee, Roosevelt added:

"Obviously, there can be no objection to hearings before such a committee. But the Congress will, I am sure, realize that if any member of the executive branch of the government, of high or low degree, is given the right by precedent to refuse to substantiate general charges against other members of the executive branch of government, and to insist on disclosing specifications only to a committee of the Congress, efficient administrative management of government would be destroyed in short order."

Jackson, in his opinion, strongly supported the right of the executive to remove Morgan, which is challenged by some congressional authorities.

He cited the Myers and Humphreys cases, which were decided by the Supreme Court. Myers was a Portland, Ore., postmaster who was removed by Woodrow Wilson. The court then upheld the President's power of removal. In the case of Humphreys, a federal trade commissioner, removed by President Roosevelt, the court held the President did not have the power of removal, because of the quasi-judicial nature of the trade commission.

JACKSON'S STAND

Section 6 of the law creating the TVA clearly gives the President the right of removal, Jackson said. This is a section providing that no political qualification shall be exacted of any employe of the TVA, the concluding sentence of which is this:

"Any member of said board who is found by the President of the United States to be guilty of a violation of this section shall be removed from office by the President of the United States.

"To authorise the President to remove a director by mere consideration of a political document in appointing a minor employe," continued Jackson, "and yet to deny him the power to remove a director for more substantial causes (perhaps amounting to malfeasance in the highest degree) would be an absurdity."

Morgan Silent on Whether to Fight

CHICAGO, March 23 (AP)—Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted chairman of the TVA, said at a press conference today, "I do not believe it suitable for me to add anything now to what I have said," regarding his case.

"I do not choose to run away," he said reporters, but declined to make any definite statement on his next move.

Asked if he considered himself ousted by President Roosevelt's action, Morgan replied:

"One doesn't usually ignore the President."

He said "legal counsel" could answer better than he whether his position with the Authority was vacant.

"I have made no decision, and I have nothing to say now or whether I will attack the legality of the ouster," he told a questioner.

Morgan said he expected to discuss the TVA situation here "with some old friends, some of them attorneys."

Youth Held in $1000 For 8-Cent Robbery

A Boston man was held in $1000 bail for the grand jury today in East Cambridge district court after he had pleaded innocent to a charge of the armed robbery of eight cents.

He was Eugenio Pagliuca, 23, of Charter street, who was accused of holding up Hypolite Ctarfler in his Cambridge home last March 10 and taking the small sum. Judge Arthur P. Stone found probable cause in the case.

Hasty Pudding Air Show Is Censored

Harvard's Hasty Pudding musical show, "We Proudly We Hail," will be broadcast over station WHZ tonight from 9 to 9:30, but only after it has been censored.

Because of its "political nature," material from the actual script has been banned, it was announced. The broadcast will consist of several specially prepared skits but will include the first public rendition of the show's hit songs.

David W. Hearst Marries Hope Chandler in New York

Historic Church Bridal Scene

Honeymoon in Europe For Couple; Sail On Queen Mary

NEW YORK, March 23 (INS)—David Whitmire Hearst, son of the publisher, William Randolph Hearst, was married in historic Grace Church today to Miss Hope Chandler in a ceremony witnessed only by members of the two families. The Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie performed the ceremony.

Immediately after the wedding, the couple embarked aboard the S. S. Queen Mary for a six weeks' honeymoon in London and Paris. When they return, early in May, they will make their home in Baltimore where the bridegroom is connected with the Baltimore News-Post.

Due to simplicity of the wedding and the noon sailing of the Queen Mary, Miss Chandler decided to dispense with the usual satin and orange blossoms, and was married in a smartly tailored coat-suit of rust-colored wool, with which she wore a small-brimmed rust colored straw hat, embellished with blue ribbon.

In place of the usual bridal bouquet, she had a corsage of green orchids.

Mrs. Benjamin Yost was matron of honor for the bride and William Randolph Hearst, Jr., the bridegroom's brother, was best man. Mr. Hearst's mother, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Sr., attended the ceremony with her sister, Mrs. Walter W. Irwin.

On board the Queen Mary, the bride's stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coley, gave an informal combination reception and "bon voyage" party in honor of the newlyweds.

Mexicans Cheer Oil Seizures

MEXICO CITY, March 23 (INS)—While foreigners kept off the streets, 100,000 cheering Mexicans today paraded through the capital demonstrating their approval of President Lazaro Cardenas' expropriation of the Anglo-American petroleum industry.

The throng carried red and red-and-black flags and banners proclaiming "Mexico for the Mexicans!" And the marchers cried: "Long live the independence of Mexico."

All schools, business and transportation ceased operating. From one end of the country to the other, there was a complete suspension of commercial and industrial activity.

Petroleum company officials, meanwhile, awaited results of a 40-minute conference between the President and U. S. Ambassador Josephus Daniels, at which the American ambassador outlined the attitude of Secretary of State Hull concerning the expropriation.

Selfridge Sees Trade Shift for Better Soon

There's nothing wrong with America and the way crisis in Europe is psychological and will soon change for the better.

That, in a nutshell, is the philosophy of H. Gordon Selfridge, Jr., handsome and brisk American executive of the famous Selfridge department stores in England, in Boston today as guest of Louis E. Kirstein of Filene's.

As an indication of booming conditions in England, Selfridge sat down to a telephone in the office of L. C. Bitner, general manager of Filene's and called direct to Peterborough, a London suburb. With a crowd of 4000 standing outside the newest and fifteenth Selfridge store (4.22 p. m. London time) the young executive issued the order to open the doors.

RIDICULES WAR

Selfridge, who returns to this country every two years to study American business, did not believe in a "recession," ridiculed a European war, and favored reciprocal trade agreements.

He said:

"Economic conditions here may fluctuate due to the temperament of the American people, but there will never be another real depression. The situation in England is generally sound, although you would not say we are on the upgrade. The war scare has done a great deal to unsettle things both in the United States and in my own country."

SEES NO WAR

Selfridge said the European war would not occur, unless there were unexpected developments not gauged by diplomats.

As for the reciprocal trade agreement:

"New England obviously suffers in the shoe and woolen industries. But I am sure it will not last. There is no such thing as a basic industry.

"In England the basic industry of coal was stripped from Newcastle and thousands were out of work. The government sent a semi-official commission which studied the situation."

The result of the study, said Selfridge, was to move up "artificial industries" into the stricken areas such as silk and glass manufacturing. Everything was tax free for four years until the transformation was on a sound basis.

He added:

"It could be done here. It is better to spend that government money in a lump instead of paying dole for a long number of years."

Sausage Strike Marked by Clash

One man was arrested today following a fist fight in connection with a strike by 350 employes of seven Greater Boston sausage factories. The men walked out to enforce demands for higher pay and better working conditions.

The arrested man was Raymond Chizzoni of Fayerweather street, Cambridge, a non-striking employe of the Colonial Provision Company. He was charged with assault and battery following a complaint lodged by Joseph A. Morrell of Linden street, Somerville, one of the strikers.

According to police, the men engaged in a fight in front of the Cross street factory. More than 200 pickets surrounded the establishment.

Train at Melrose Kills Man

A man believed to be Robert Vaughan, 73, a carpenter, of Summer street, Melrose, was killed by a Boston & Maine train today at Wyoming avenue crossing, Melrose, the second train victim at that spot in four days.

According to stories of witnesses to police, today's victim stepped from the inbound platform of the station, which comes up to the barred crossing, directly in front of the Portland-Boston train.

His body was buried several feet and doctors said he had been killed instantly.

Traffic on the main line, Portland division, was delayed about 20 minutes as a result of the accident.

Last Saturday, Ray A. Hodgkins, 60, of Cottage street, Melrose, dead clerk employed by the railroad, was killed at the crossing when he failed to hear a train.

B. U. Music Head Backs Boston Audiences

Dean Marshall Says Prokofieff Blast Is Mistake

"If the audience did not like his Fourth Symphony, I should be inclined to blame the symphony—not the audience."

This was the reply today of Dean John P. Marshall, head of the Boston University college of music, to Serge Prokofieff, famous modern Russian composer, who accused Boston music lovers of understanding only "childish" music.

Nettled at the reception given his Fourth Symphony here a few years ago, Prokofieff revealed upon his arrival in Boston that he had arranged a program of "simple music" to the "childish tastes of Boston's symphony-goers." He is scheduled to appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday afternoon and Saturday night.

"SIMPLE EXPLANATIONS"

A storm of protest followed the Russian composer's remarks. And the latter added fuel to the fire by saying that Richard Hair, narrator, would explain his compositions at the concerts in words of two syllables.

Dean Marshall declared:

"The Boston Symphony audience, which seems to have provoked Serge Prokofieff to the extent that he feels compelled to seek revenge, is without doubt one of the most intelligent musical audiences in the world."

James A. Ecker, supervisor of music in the Boston schools, took up the cudgels for Boston, saying:

FREEDOM VITAL

"Freedom of taste is as important as freedom of speech, and no one person has a right to try to impose his individual taste upon a discriminating public."

Tribute to Prokofieff's genius was paid by Mrs. A. Lewis Armistead, who has always taken an active interest in musical activities in Boston, and who is herself a talented musician.

"This is very regrettable," she said. "I am a great admirer of Prokofieff, as are many other members of the Boston Symphony audiences.

"It is distressing that he should have been given such a false impression of the musical taste of the Boston Symphony audiences, which are more liberale musically than those of any city in America."

'Company Unions' Hit by NLRB Aide

Weigh Ringling Tax Plea

Company unions are "sponsored, financed and controlled by belligerent employers," David Saposs, chief economist of the National Labor Relations Board, testified in Federal court today. Saposs was speaking at a hearing being held by the NLRB on charges of a CIO union that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. interfered with employe representation at the company's East Boston and Fore River plants.

Catholic Cleric Scores Hull as 'Inconsistent'

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—That Secretary of State Hull was not consistent in his treatment of events in Spain was charged here by Monsignor Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the Catholic welfare conference.

The pastor declared Hull was silent when priests were murdered, but expressed horror at the Barcelona bombing.

Monsignor Ready's statement follows:

"Secretary of State Hull's expression of abhorrence at the hundreds of deaths in Barcelona due to air bombardment of that city reiterates this government's honorable position in respect to a humane prosecution of war. Mr. Hull's reputation as a distinguished American statesman bears out the sincerity of his expressed grief.

"However, it cannot fail to emphasize in many minds Mr. Hull's complete silence when, also in Spain, not hundreds but many thousands of priests and religious were wantonly murdered. These killings had back of them not even the attempted justification of military exigencies; they were perpetrated on the simple basis of the victims being religious.

"Nor did Mr. Hull feel called upon to express horror when, nearer to our own country, in Mexico civilians as well as religious were killed in the course of a vicious religious persecution which still persists.

"General Franco in Spain asserts that Barcelona held many military objectives, such as munitions factories, and that this justified the aerial bombings."

"No one can be anything but deeply regretful and shocked over the fact that civilians in Barcelona have suffered death from the air, under whatever circumstances. One would, however, expect from the leading cabinet officer of our governmental some-what more consistency in the matter of such expressions as Mr. Hull has just issued."

Vigilantes Hunt Cape Firebug

HYANNIS, March 23—Vigilantes in automobiles today began a night-and-day patrol of the roads of this town to find a firebug believed responsible for a series of eight forest fires in 48 hours.

Police Chief William B. Fleming announced that police officers, firemen, deputy sheriffs and private citizens had been banded together to hunt down a pyromaniac.

Police found that three fires, the last of which occurred a short time ago, were set by a device made of a cigarette tied to a flare of combustible material.

The cigarette is lit and tossed into the woods, burns for several minutes, giving the firebug chance to escape, then bursts into flames.

Little damage has been done so far, but fire officials expressed fear that any blaze might spread through the entire woodlands.

National Guard Forbids Kane's 'Drunk Cage'

Mayor Says He Will Handle Situation; 'Not Afraid'

LAWRENCE, March 23 (AP)—Mayor William E. Kane of Woburn, lawyer, ex-marine and creator of a "lion's cage for drunks," was informed today National Guard headquarters forbade him to exhibit his cage tonight at a beano at the Woburn Armory and promptly announced:

"I'm not afraid of those guys."

The mayor had intended to unveil at the armory his non-like device to promote temperance. The beano game was scheduled for the benefit of the city's milk fund.

"You know what they used to say: 'Let the marines handle the situation,'" Kane asserted. "Well I'll take good care of the situation."

The mayor complained the beano party had been scheduled for some weeks and explained he had put $1000 into it.

Austrian Panic Denied in Vienna

"Thousands of Political Suicides" False, Bishops Free, Reports Claim

VIENNA, March 23 (AP)—Authoritative quarters issued a long list of denials today over foreign reports of alleged panicky feeling among Austrians since union with Germany.

One denial strongly rejected rumors of thousands of suicides since the Nazi accession to power.

The statement said that "from March 12 to March 22, 96 persons committed suicide in Vienna, of which only 50 were directly connected with the change in the political situation in Austria."

The statement added that only two members of former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's cabinet were under protective custody.

The arrest of the Archduke Antoine von Hapsburg was denied.

The Gestapo (political police) added another blueblood to the list of those taken into protective custody by arresting at Mondsee the 84-year-old Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, son of Grandduke Ferdinand of Tuscana, for "humiliating utterances against Nazism."

It was explained the utterances had caused considerable indignation among the population.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, chief of Germany's four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency, is expected to leave Berlin tomorrow for Vienna, where he is to proclaim an economic program for German Austria, March 26.

There he is to go on a speaking tour of Austrian cities, including Graz, Klagenfurt, Salzburg and Mauthausen.

Goering is expected to head an influx of the Austrian Legion, brought into Nazi-ruled Austria from Germany during the anti-Nazi regime in Austria. Ever since the anschluss they have been flocking back to Austria.

Schuschnigg, virtual prisoner in his Belvedere palace grounds since Austria's union with Germany, appeared to be confined to his house today.

Sixty S. S. (Blackshirt) guards, apparently members of Adolf Hitler's bodyguard, who previously had held posts outside the premises, moved to a little house inside the grounds.

There was no authoritative explanation of the shift.

Former Vice-Chancellor Emil Fey, who killed himself, was buried yesterday along with his wife and son, whose bodies were found with his. There were no mourners at the service.

Jewish teachers and students, summoned to meet in courtyards, were told they would not be permitted to continue their studies at present. It was hinted the order might be revoked soon.

Beck, Polish Minister, Sees Lithuania Peace

WARSAW, March 23 (AP)—Foreign Minister Joseph Beck told the Senate today the road was open for Poland and Lithuania to establish neighborly relations on a basis of mutual good will."

Discussing the episode of last week, when Lithuania bowed to her Baltic neighbor's will for restored diplomatic relations, Beck turned to the border incident which had threatened to throw the two nations into war and said:

"One Polish soldier was killed and if his blood will seal an understadding between two neighbor nations he will have given his life to a noble cause. Besides, the world must know that in Poland the whole state stands behind every soldier on duty."

Britons Advised To Quit Austria Now

LONDON, March 23 (INS)—British nationals are being advised to leave Austria without delay as the result of "indignities" suffered at the hands of Nazis, it was stated authoritatively here today.

Tourists, it was said, are being arrested and searched and otherwise confronted with difficulties. They are being advised not to return to Austria until the situation is clarified.

Blum's Cabinet Battles For Money Bill Passage

PARIS, March 23 (AP)—Premier Leon Blum's second People's Front government came to grips with the conservative Senate for the first time today, with the life of his cabinet depending on passage of bills to replenish the treasury and to finance defense.

Two measures were submitted to the Senate finance committee. The first provides 5,000,000,000 francs ($150,000,000) in new loans from the Bank of France to the treasury, and the second would turn over 3,149,000,000 francs ($94,470,000) surplus from the stabilization fund to the defense fund.

The chamber previously approved the measures.

Conservative senatorial opposition to inflationary acts aroused talk in the senate and parliamentary lobbies of the possibility of a new crisis opening the way to further efforts to form a national union government of all parties.

Nazis Claim Only 1742 Now in Vienna 'Custody'

BERLIN, March 23—German government authorities today stated there are no truth to reports of 10,000 arrests in Vienna. Only 1742 persons remained in some form of custody on charges including criminal offenses and currency violations, it was said.

The list of persons taken into protective custody, "some at their own request," included Colonel Walter Adam, Austrian police chief; Ludwig Bechinie, former Salzburg chief of police; Siegmund Bresch, Nazi financier; Rudolf Colbert, of the newspaper Telegraf; Ludwig Braxler, former finance minister; Karl Gastisch, former lower Austria police chief.

ROTHSCHILD HELD

Also Duke Maximilian of Hohenberg; Prince Ernst of Hohenberg; Baron Louis Rothschild, financier; Ludwig Klausner, director general of the Credit Anstalt; Joseph Reither, former functionary of lower Austria; Ludwig Weiser, a former police chief; and Alois Vollgruber, former Austrian minister to Paris.

Many of those held, it was said, would be released when fears for their safety subsided.

The greater German election campaign for the April 10 plebiscite summoned to endorse Chancellor Hitler's annexation of Austria was declared officially open today.

Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, in an address before a Nazi party conference at the Sports Palace, heard by 1,000,000 persons by radio, declared:

"I cannot imagine anybody voting against Reichsfuehrer Hitler except perhaps the Jews, who do not have the right to vote, anyhow."

DANUBE FLOTILLA

Adolf Hitler, meanwhile, moved another step toward bringing the new "eastern province" of Austria more completely under German control.

He ordered the German navy to organize a Danube river flotilla and take over the Austrian monitors which formerly patrolled this historic stretch of water.

Japan Plans New Nanking Rule

TOKYO, March 23 (INS)—Plans were rushed today for inauguration of a new government of the Republic of China to be established in Nanking, former capital of Nanking probably either tomorrow or Saturday.

The new Nanking regime, it was stated, will adopt the five-colored flag of ancient China and will cooperate with Japan. The newly-restored North China government established recently in Peiping, now remained autonomous.

The new Nanking regime is expected to consist of 26 Chinese leaders willing to "co-operate" with Japan. It will exercise jurisdiction over areas of central China already conquered by Nipponese forces.

Premier of the Nanking regime will be Liang Hung-Chih, aged Chinese diplomat, it is anticipated.

Hospital Bans Nazi Emblem

Placed in Chimney by Boston Architect

NEW YORK, March 23 (INS)—Removal of two swastikas built into the 335-foot smokestack of the New York Hospital powerhouse was ordered today by the board of directors of the institution.

Several complaints about the Swastikas have been received although they were built into the stack before Hitler came to power in Germany and adopted the Swastika as the official Nazi emblem.

The Swastikas are near the top of the tall hospital chimney and one faces east and the other faces west. They are of dark bricks that stand out against the nearly white bricks of the rest of the chimney.

Henry R. Shipley of Boston, architect for the hospital, revealed the Swastikas had been placed in the stack merely to break the monotony of the expanse of brick and had no special significance.

Labor in Britain Urged to Speed Rearmament

Commons Will Hear Chamberlain Talk on Foreign Policy

LONDON, March 23 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today sought support of British labor for speeding up the country's vast rearmament program.

At the same time, he laid before his ministers for approval a policy of "no new commitments" abroad.

Chamberlain asked the general council of the Trades Union Congress to meet with him tonight at 10 Downing street.

He took negotiations with labor leaders into his own hands after attending a cabinet session devoted to the foreign policy statement he will make in Commons tomorrow.

He is expected to tell organized labor's "cabinet" that a new quickening of rearmament must parallel Britain's course of action in the troubled international situation.

PLANS DEFENSES

Already the prime minister has warned the country that the five-year armament program will cost more than the $7,500,000,000 originally announced.

Political commentators believe Chamberlain's objection to his "no new commitments" policy—which he asked the cabinet to approve unanimously—primarily is this:

Britain would work to build her own defenses, but would not enter into any new alliances which would drag the nation into war, unless the homeland itself actually was threatened with aggression, directly or indirectly.

TO AVOID PLEDGES

Chamberlain presumably would continue to fight for completion the British-Italian friendship talks, but his reported intention to avoid new pledges seemingly meant the Czechoslovakia could not count on British aid in the event of German Nazi incursion.

France is pledged to aid Czechoslovakia in repelling aggression and has asked the British government to join in that pledge.

The French government, reliable sources said, virtually has abandoned hope that Chamberlain's statement to Commons will include any promise of British military aid to Czechoslovakia.

Europe Warned Again by Duce

ROME, March 23 (INS)—Premier Mussolini celebrated Fascism's 19th anniversary today with another warning to the nations of Europe to provide for peace.

"The world should know we are for peace," he said, addressing a huge audience from the balcony of the palazzo Venezia, "but we fight, we shall win for the greatness of the present and future of the Italian people."

New Allies Join Czech Nazis

PRAHA, March 23 (AP)—Czechoslovakia faced a new political situation today with German parties hitherto outside the Nazi ranks climbing on the bandwagon of Konrad Henlein, leader of the republic's Nazi Germans.

The resignation of Erwin Zajicek, representing the German Christian Socialist party in the cabinet as minister without portfolio, was expected by tomorrow.

Political observers envisioned a transformation of the entirety of Czechs and Slovaks, which would attempt to come to some understanding with Henlein's Sudeten-German party and its satellites.

Of 300 seats in the chamber, Henlein hitherto has controlled 42.

Asks U. S. Boycott On Austria

SAN BERNADINO, Cal., March 23—"Buy American—Boycott German Goods."

This was the plea of Samuel Untermeyer today as he announced the International Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi Boycott League Against German Goods would be extended against Austrian goods.

As president of the league, Untermeyer declared:

"It is not necessary to spill American blood to stem the tide. A boycott of all German goods will destroy and bankrupt Germany and vindicate American honor and manhood."

Windsor Denies Appeal to Hitler

PARIS, March 23 (INS)—The Duke of Windsor's entourage today issued an official denial of reports published abroad that the former monarch had appealed to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler for the release of personal friends in Austria.

Personal friends of the duke arrested in Austria include Baron Eugen Rothschild, his former host at Castle Enzesfeld, and Professor Heinrich Neumann, sinus specialist who has treated him on numerous occasions.

Hull Speech Assailed

Neutrality Law Repeal Rejected

Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, March 23—Apprehension over American involvement in world politics in two inflammable continents was made manifest in the House of Representatives today.

William Randolph Hearst's vigorous editorial in the Hearst papers Sunday was read and discussed at the Capitol.

REP. FISH

REP. TINKHAM

It met with high commendation. Rep. Hamilton Fish, of New York, ranking Republican member of the foreign affairs committee, called the editorial to the attention of the House soon after it met, and asked unanimous consent to have it published in the Congressional Record. Objection was made by Representative Woodrum, Democrat, of Virginia.

This happened a few minutes after the foreign affairs committee, by a unanimous vote, refused to take up for consideration any of the pending bills proposing the repeal of the neutrality law. It also refused to grant hearings on the Maas bill or other similar measures.

ACT WILL STAND

This definitely kills the possibility of repeal of the neutrality act at this session. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Fish said in a statement:

"The efforts to repeal the neutrality act were intended to give President Roosevelt power to determine aggressor nations which would mean that we would become involved in every war in the world as soon as the President had obtained this authority."

Commenting on Mr. Hearst's editorial, Mr. Fish added:

"I concur whole-heartedly with the editorial in the Hearst newspapers last Monday on Mr. Hull's so-called peace speech.

"I have the greatest regard for Mr. Hull and his sincerity but his lengthy peace talk was a mass of glittering generalities, without a single constructive proposal to an end the war hysteria that is now covering the country, or to solve any peace problems.

"Hidden away between the condemnation of warlike nations and academic praise of peace was the crux of the speech, in which the secretary of state admitted that the policy of the administration was to join in parallel action with other nations to punish the aggressor.

"This is a complete departure from American tradition.

"Mr. Hearst is correct in believing that the secretary of state in spite of all his peace platitudes, intends to embroil us in foreign disputes which eventually would mean our fighting other people's battles."

NEUTRALITY URGED

Representative George H. Tinkham of Massachusetts, another Republican member of the foreign affairs committee, said of Mr. Hearst's editorial:

"Mr. Hearst has written an editorial which is wholly American and wholly patriotic.

"As is true, President Roosevelt and Mr. Hull are opposed to American neutrality, the character of neutrality which in the late war kept Holland, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden off the blood-soaked battlefields of Europe.

That is the neutrality that the United States should maintain, but which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull are attempting in every way to destroy in order that we may participate in the wars of Europe and Asia.

"There are two groups of powers. One is the Moscow-Paris-London group. The other the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo group. If the United States intervenes in Europe or Asia it will be compelled to side with one of these groups. The President and Secretary of State have the desire apparently to join the Moscow group.

"They apparently want to make the world safe for Communism.

"Mr. Hearst has shown high patriotism and sound judgment in his analysis of the present situation and has pointed out the course we should take."

HITS HULL TALK

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, said:

"I was in doubt after reading Secretary Hull's recent radio address at the National Press Club as to just what his position would be on the future attitude of our government.

"There was never a time when it was so necessary we should keep out of foreign wars and mind our own business.

"I feel as Mr. Hearst has so strongly expressed it in Sunday's editorial, that Mr. Hull's speech was obscure and indefinite, and requires further clarification."

War Profits Tax Recommended In Senate

WASHINGTON, March 23 (INS)—Joining the preparedness parade, a Senate Finance subcommittee today recommended that a special war-time tax bill "to take the profit out of war" be attached to the pending revenue measure.

Senator Tom Connally, (D.) of Texas, sponsor of the bill and chairman of the subcommittee, predicted the full Finance committee would adopt his measure as a separate title to the tax bill.

"My bill," Connally said, "would provide for a comprehensive system of taxation to go into effect immediately when war begins. I believe that no one should be allowed to profit by war."

HEAVY SURTAXES

The Connally bill would in wartime impose personal surtax rates beginning at 6 per cent on the first $1000 of net income after a $3500 exemption, and rise to 80 per cent on incomes exceeding $50,000 annually.

For corporations, there would be stipulated a system of graduated taxes, based on the theory of the undistributed profits tax. Corporations retaining all of their earnings would be taxed 77 per cent, with lower rates depending upon the amount of earnings distributed.

$7,800,000,000 REVENUE

The proposed wartime schedule for personal taxes would raise $7,800,000,000 in revenue based on 1928 incomes, Treasury experts figured. No estimates were made on the proposed corporation taxes.

Meanwhile, the administration lined up its forces in the Senate to prevent wrecking of the New Deal's taxation policies. A hostile majority in the Senate Finance Committee was expected to report revisions in the House-approved revenue bill which are unacceptable to the President.

Trial for Two Set In $2.41 Slaying

WORCESTER, March 23—An 18-year-old Worcester youth, who with a companion is accused of killing a man to get $2.41, tried in vain to plead guilty to a first degree murder charge today in Worcester district court.

Judge Frank L. Riley refused the plea and directed that a plea of not guilty be entered for Will Walley of Clayton street. The other defendant, Edward Adamson, 18, of Exchange street, pleaded not guilty. They were held without bail for a further hearing April 2. Both are Negroes.

The body of their alleged victim, Eric W. Sederberg, 58, of Lincoln square, was found in an alley off Loberty street last Monday.

According to police, Walley confessed that he and Adamson trailed Sederberg, who was struck on the head with a club and dragged into the alley, and robbed.

Adamson, denying any part in the killing, admitted he was with Walley the night of the slaying, police said.

Decline in Jobs Continuing

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—A continuing decline in employment and the need of small business men for prompt governmental aid were disclosed today in the reports of two administration officers.

Secretary of Labor Perkins said Labor Department figures for February showed that total non-agricultural employment dropped of 100,000 from January, although factory employment increased 0.6 per cent. The decline was the smallest in several months.

Miss Perkins said industry generally was maintaining recovery pay scales.

Secretary of Commerce Roper said small businessmen are in need of prompt governmental help, in a report to President Roosevelt on a final analysis of 3900 letters received from small businessmen since their conference here on February 3. Roper, however, did not make any recommendations.

Bill for Four-Man Board Pushed

Legislation to reorganize the State Civil Service Department was urged today by members of the Massachusetts Civil League, inc., at a hearing before the joint legislative committee on State administration.

Under the terms of the measure, a bi-partisan civil service commission of four members would be set up on appointment of the Governor. The four commissioners would select an executive director, to serve an indefinite term, and who could only be removed by the commissioners after a public hearing.

The present civil service board consists of Commissioner Thomas H. Green and two associate commissioners.

When members of the legislative committee came to the defense of Commissioner Green, whose term expires December 1, Livingston Hall, chairman of the public service of the league, replied:

"This bill is not aimed at Green. The bill has no intention of affecting anyone. If we were 'gunning' for Green we'd have brought the bill in a year ago."

Pendleton Sees Lower Wages By Pact

The proposed reciprocal trade pact with Great Britain would lower the wage scale in the woolen industry of America, Moses Pendleton, president of the American Woolen Company, declared today.

Urging that the tariff rates be controlled by Congress and not fixed by a treaty which for three years could be changed only by the concurrence of Great Britain, Mr. Pendleton declared:

"The wool textile industry believes that a reduction in the tariff on its products would commit it to an equal competition which it could not meet except by a drastic reduction in its present wage scale."

WRITES GRADY

The woolen company official expressed his views in a letter to Henry F. Grady, chairman of the reciprocal trade agreement information committee.

Continuing, he stated:

"Labor, both organized and unorganized, shares this apprehension and is working with the industry and with the textile committee to preserve the standard of living.

"On this issue the two great competing labor organizations are in accord. It is only necessary to state that hourly wages paid textile workers in England are about one-third of those paid in the United States, in Italy, one-seventh; in Czechoslovakia, one-twelfth, and in Japan, one-twenty-seventh."

Mr. Pendleton declared that any reduction in the tariff rates granted in any agreement with Great Britain is automatically granted to all nations of the most favored list.

He said he believed this list included practically every country except Germany.

Lace and Clothing Open Pact Battle

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—Representatives of clothing and lace manufacturers pleaded today with government tariff experts against duty reductions on their products in the proposed trade agreement with the United Kingdom.

A. F. Allison, New York, representing the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, testified that "from our own and the English viewpoint we urge no change in tariffs."

He explained tariff reductions would "not benefit either domestic industry or English manufacturers, because cheaper labor countries would take advantage of our market."

"Our objection to tariff reductions," he continued, "is not that we be so great if 200,000 workers on relief projects were not making goods."

Employment in the clothing industry, Allison said, dropped from 72,000 workers in December, 1937, to 63,000 wage earners in January, 1938.

2 Youths Seized In Levine Case

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. March 23 (INS)—One week to the day from the kidnaping of 12-year-old Peter Levine, two youths were arrested today charged with sending a $30,000 ransom note to the grief-stricken father.

Confederate hoods, chains and handcuffs were found in their home, police and G-men doubted that they were involved in the actual kidnaping.

They were charged with extortion under the state law, and described themselves as Edward John Penn, 18, senior at Pelham High School and Werner Fred Huck, 23, married, native of Germany.

Both live in North Pelham.

Army Economizing On Its Saluting

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—Congress learned today that the army's official military salutes cost $124,500 annually—but according to Major General W. H. Tschappat, ordnance chief the War Department "endeavors to help all it can to hold down the estimates, and $28,580 is all we can put into saluting ammunition."

Senate Rushes Vote on Job Gift Probe

Gov. Hurley Protests House Order for Investigation

broken, it may tie up that amount of federal funds allotted here for the unemployment under the Social Security Act and further delay payments to the needy unemployed.

The Washington agents' appearance here are in addition to the routine investigation carried out by the Social Security Board.

The move by the House of Representatives yesterday in passing the order calling for the probe marked Governor Hurley's bitterest blow since he assumed office.

Even as the House voted along party lines, 123 to 85 for the investigation, so will the Senate carry through with the Republican majority in voting the order, it was predicted in political circles today.

The Senate consists of 27 Republicans and 13 Democrats, assuring proponents of the order the necessary two-thirds majority to pass an order. It was even predicted, however, that several Democrats in the Senate would vote for the order.

ORDER, NOT RESOLVE

The blow to Governor Hurley comes, however, in the substitution of the measure as an order rather than the original resolve.

Under the rules of the state an order does not require the signature of the governor, although it requires a two-thirds vote in both branches.

A resolve may pass both branches by a majority vote but requires the signature of the governor.

Under the setup as it is now, Governor Hurley would have no chance to place his veto on the measure, if he should so desire.

Even before the House took its vote yesterday, the governor branded the measure as "unjust and unfair." His Democratic cohorts fought valiantly against the investigation but were easily outnumbered by the Republicans.

DEBATE ON JOBS

Spirited debate on jobs at the commission centered around the placing of employes in positions where vacancies are alleged to have been filled without regard to civil service lists that carried eligibles for such jobs.

Much of the delay in payments of unemployed under the Social Security unemployment law was blamed to such a condition in the House debate. The arguments born out exclusive information given to readers of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American this week.

In Lawrence today, Joseph Salerno, director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, charged that unemployed textile workers of Greater Lawrence "are being tossed around unmercifully" by the unemployment commission.

He declared that more than 200 unemployed, who filed application for compensation months ago, had not received their checks. Salerno revealed that a committee of five, led by him, have an appointment with Governor Hurley Friday morning on the matter.

PLANS PROTEST

"Unless we get satisfactory action by the first of the week," Salerno said, "I will call a series of mass meetings beginning in Lowell, Lawrence and Worcester to protest the delay and demand action from the State House.

Should the order for investigation pass the Senate as it did the House, appointment of two senators and five representatives as the investigating committee is certain to follow within a short time.

Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline, Republican leader of the drive for the investigation, promised today that he would "name names and give other startling information" when the investigating committee is formed.

At hearings before the joint legislative committee recently, Bowker had previously charged that Governor Hurley placed at least 17 who were delegates for him at the 1936 Democratic convention into high paying jobs at the offices of the commission.

Women Are Blamed As He Goes to Cell

Thomas A. Greene of Marshfield began a three-year term in the house of correction today after pleading guilty to the theft of $31,200 from his employer over a six-year period.

Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan told Suffolk court that Greene's troubles began when he was ordered to pay $35 a week alimony from a $40 salary. Another woman on whom he spent $7000 in one year was also responsible for his plight, Sullivan said.

HUGH JOHNSON SAYS: Capital Airport a Menace

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, March 23—Here is something from a letter written to me by a distinguished and public spirited aviator about what he calls "that stinking situation in the BAC." BAC means "Bureau of Air Commerce." My last letter was about a column I wrote panning the bureau for too much bureaucracy and not enough common sense in supervising the construction of airplanes.

This is crack from another angle:

"And while you are about it, please very much, say something about that frightful Washington airport mess. Every time I fly over it I thank God I'm a military pilot and may land at Bolling instead of risking my life at the other place.

"But I also wonder that our democracy doesn't stand on its hind legs and for pride's sake do something about it. It is things like that from which dictators get their arguments. Hitler might well sneer a disdainful sneer as he compares (or contrasts rather) Tempelhof airdrome with the landing patch that serves the capital of the greatest democracy.

"And, of course, it all goes back to the BAC. If that organization were headed up by executives and doers instead of parlor politicos (an epithet, alas, which applied to our Vidal) and lawyers, a real plan would have been put to Congress long years ago, and pushed and pushed and pushed by the BAC until something was done.

"But the whole job has been left apathetically in the lap of Congress, and that body being made up entirely of Congressmen and not airmen, is still 'making surveys,' according to latest dispatches, over 15 long years after the problem was first recognized."

The Washington airport is wrong every way—too small, badly located and designed, intersected by an arterial highway, treacherous and, above all, dangerous.

I think the very hazard of take-offs and landings there has something to do with the fact that there have not been more accidents. Greater precautions have to be taken than at a decent field and the fact that there is more danger keeps everyone alert.

But that is no proper consideration for maintaining a potential death-trap at the aerial front door of our Capital City. It is a matter of national and not merely local pride and concern.

What the letter says is right. There are at least two other excellent sites. Everybody admits and nobody challenges these criticisms of the present terminal. Politics and private interest keep the move for change stopped.

It is an official lethargy that will probably only be broken by some frightful disaster. When that comes there will be no place to put the blame except on the shoulders of the people responsible for not removing a risk recognized by everybody.

Traffic at this port is heavy—too heavy for its facilities.

Finally, a good point in the letter is that there ought to be some element of pride in providing airport facilities at the national capital at least fit to serve as a front yard for a dog-house.

No airport in the country is entirely satisfactory. Aircraft are developing in size and speed faster than the development of fields adequate for their reception.

But of all the important airports I have seen—and I think I have seen them all—the Washington airport is by long odds the worst. That consideration alone should be enough to get something done about this dangerous and disgraceful condition.

Tea Will Open Frank V. Smith Art Exhibit on Monday

By BETTY ALDEN

OUR MANY YATCHING enthusiasts, as well as art lovers, are looking forward to the exhibit of paintings by Frank Vining Smith of Hingham, who is said to be the top ranking marine artist in the United States today . . .

Mr. Smith's exhibition of paintings opens next Monday afternoon with a private view and tea at the Vose Galleries . . .

Mrs. Bradford Price (Jane Kelley), who is one of the most skilled feminine sailors on the South Shore, together with Mrs. Richard D. McMullan of Cambridge, who sails on the North Shore every summer, will be pourers on this occasion . . .

Other pourers will be Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., of Beverly Farms, Mrs. Alexander Forbes of Milton, Mrs. W. Gardner Barker, 2d (Milda Allen) of Brookline and Mrs. Weston Howland of Milton . . .

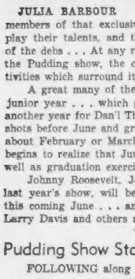
THE RUGGED HE-MEN who arrange the affairs of the Hasty Pudding Club each year probably wouldn't care for the simile . . . yet their annual theatrical production seems to be Cupid's hand maiden . . .



JULIA BARBOUR

Perhaps it's because it gives the members of that exclusive Harvard club an opportunity to display their talents, and the footlights ennoble them in the eyes of the debs . . . At any rate it seems that romances grow out of the Pudding show, the costume dance and the other social activities which surround it . . .

A great many of the Puddingers appear in the play in their junior year . . . which gives them another year to study and another year for Dan'l The Archer to get in some carefully aimed shots before June and graduation time rolls around . . . so along about February or March of that year the prospective graduate begins to realize that June is the month of bridal processions as well as graduation exercises . . .

Johnny Roosevelt, John Millet and Markoe Rivinius, all in last year's show, will be married to the ladies of their choice this coming June . . . and Marshall Field, Jr., Johnny Graham, Larry Davis and others are keeping company . . .

Pudding Show Stars Broadcast Tonight

FOLLOWING along this line any society editor could score some scoops on the wedding news of 1939 if she could only check up on the radios in Back Bay and Beacon Hill at 9 o'clock this evening . . . Most of them will be tuned in on station WBZ for the half hour pre-view broadcast of the Pudding's forthcoming show . . . but she could learn much by carefully noting which debs listen with the most prideful expectancy when the announcer mentions the names of different boys in the cast . . .

Featured on tonight's broadcast will be Nathaniel Benchley, son of the famous humorist, Ben Welles, son of the under secretary of state, and Vinton Freedley, Jr., whose father is a prominent theatrical producer . . . and the song hits from "So Proudly We Hail," which these three boys together with Stanley Miller and Alan Lerner have composed, will be sung by the "ladies" of the chorus . . . In this group are Crocker Wight, John Brooks, Robert White, Robert Brown, Alan Lerner, Augustus Crocker, Alden Haskell, Peter Pratt, Charles Dyer, 2d, Bayard and Henly Dillingham, Samuel W. Morris, Jr., William Ladgerwood, Andrew Young, Frederick Witherby, Roger D. Lapham, Jr., Viscount A. G. de Pourtales, Paul Glendenning and Augustus Soule . . .

Leaguers Organize for Book Drive

DOROTHY RACKEMANN, who is chairman of the annual book drive sponsored by the Junior League to collect books and magazines for the libraries of the American Merchant Marine, has enlisted the aid of a large committee of Junior League girls to assist her . . .

Among them are Julia Barbour, who is devoting her time to spreading the news about the drive over the radio . . . Rosamond Hamlin, who is chairman of the girls who drive around to various homes to collect the books . . . Mary Otis Nash, whose job is to see that the appeal for books is properly publicized . . . Barbara Eaton, secretary of the drive . . . Elizabeth Marston, chairman of circulation . . . and Elizabeth Cunningham, vice-chairman of collections . . .

This literary scavanger hunt will be held all next week, beginning bright and early Monday morning . . . with headquarters at 841 Boylston street . . . A few statistics on former drives, as compiled by Robert D. Franklin, librarian of the American Merchant Marine Library Association reveals the fact that since 1921 more than 3,500,000 selected volumes have been circulated among the sailors . . . and, at a conservative estimate, this figure represents over 35,000,000 readers . . . The cost of each reading is estimated at two cents per book, although the books have been distributed to sailors in every ocean, including Admiral Byrd's Antarctic expedition . . .

Also Rev. Phillips E. Osgood, Mr. Louis A. Kirstein, Mr. Eliot Wadsworth, Mr. Robert Peabody, Mr. Frank D. Ashburn of the Brooks School, Mr. W. L. W. Field of Milton Academy and Mr. Eugene R. Smith of Beaver Country Day School . . .

Plan Decoration Lectures at League

Series of Three Talks Will Open Next Month

The names of Mrs. Channing Cox, Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth Grew and Mrs. E. Sohier Welch are on the long list of distinguished Boston women who are acting as patronesses for the series of three lectures on home decoration, which are to be given at the Junior League.

The lectures are to be given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Institute of Decorators. The first is scheduled for Thursday evening, April 7. James H. Blauvelt of New York will speak on the "Drama of Decorating."

Madame Charles Huard will be the second speaker on Thursday evening, April 21. She will talk on "Pavilion du Barry," the famous chateau which she has owned for 15 years. The third lecture will also come on a Thursday evening, May 5. Gertrude Green Robinson will tell of "The Four First Executive Mansions of the United States." These mansions are the two houses in New York which Washington occupied as president; the Robert Morris house in Philadelphia which was Washington's official residence for five years; and the first executive mansion in Washington, where John Adams lived during part of his term.

Included on the long list of patronesses are: Mrs. James B. Ayer, Mrs. Edward Ballantine, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Mrs. J. Dellinger Barnay, Mrs. Albert Farwell Bemis, Mrs. Horace Binney, Mrs. Francis W. Bird, Mrs. William Brewster, Mrs. Willard Cogswell, Miss Ada M. Comstock, Mrs. H. Deland Chandler, Mrs. John T. Coolidge, Mrs. Robert G. Dodge, Mrs. Henry H. President's Story of 'Deal' Tells Objectives, Plans

Roosevelt Explains Difference Between State, Federal Moves

the increased purchasing power might or might not benefit the business and industry of that particular state, to the same degree, for it might well be spent on the products of other states and produce its effects outside the state.

The same result follows in many other fields of reform. Where artificial state lines limit the effects of policies which should apply to entire correlated geographical areas or to the whole of one industry, the results can never be the same within the particular state as when action is taken along national lines.

Furthermore, there are matters which are exclusively of federal jurisdiction—such as the monetary system, tariffs, foreign trade, interstate commerce—which always have an immediate effect on attempts to meet social and economic problems by state action.

These matters cannot constitutionally be handled even partially by any state government to assist in effectuating a program of reform.

State and National Methods Must Vary

I do not mean to imply that my administration as governor of New York was in any sense a counterpart of what came later. The objectives were the same. But for all the reasons I have mentioned, and for many others, it was impossible to use all the various methods to attain those objectives that were available during my term as President.

In so far as it was possible to adapt state-wide measures to the attainment of a broader social justice, it was done.

With these differences between action along state lines and action by the national government, I trust that the years of my governorship may be recognized as the beginnings of the general aims and purposes of the New Deal.

I trust that there will be found a bond of consistency and continuity of objectives, and that occasional variations of method and detail coming from lack of government precedent, from insufficient available information and from need for experimentation will not obscure the close similarity of broad purposes toward which we were striving.

I had thought of these things for many years and had talked sometimes adopted the practice of "playing both ends against the middle."

When an administration favorable to special privilege is in power in Washington these corporations begged for federal control in order to circumvent those state governments and public service commissions which were trying to enforce the original conception of a public utility in the public good.

When, however, we have a federal administration devoted to protection of the consuming public, these same corporations call loudly for state control only.

During my term as governor, for example, some of these companies relied on the sympathy of the national administration to block every possible effort of mine to obtain adequate control and supervision in the state of New York.

When I became President they transferred their efforts and their affections by an appeal to the old slogan of "State Rights", N. S.

of them too. The governorship was the first opportunity which I had to do something about them in a practical though limited way.

Much was done during my administration as governor with respect to old-age security, development of electricity from water power, adequate regulation of public utility operating and holding companies, unemployment relief by direct aid and through public works, unemployment insurance, wages and hours of labor, assistance to agriculture, land planning and land use, improvement in the administration of justice, reforestation, aid to the blind, to crippled children, to dependent mothers, and many other steps in progressive government.

Growth to Deal Action From State Moves Natural

The growth and expansion were promised in the Democratic national platform of 1932.

They were approved by the election of 1932.

They were started on March 4, 1933.

It has been noticed by hostile political writers that in some instances recommendations made by me as governor apparently do not fully square with my later recommendations to the Congress.

True enough.

But what they fail to call attention to is that while I was governor demanding action along state lines, the national administration in many instances was consistently blocking efforts by the states to curb unsocial activities by progressive state legislation.

It is an interesting fact that during the past generation certain large corporate interests, especially in the utility field, have

"State Right," Federal Beliefs Consistent

In saying this I am not referring to the courts but rather to broad government policies. In Albany I was forced to work for state action because of the attitude of Washington. When I went to Washington I was able by reversing the national policy to give aid to states who wished to help themselves along progressive lines.

While I was governor also, on many occasions I spoke in favor of "Home Rule" in its application to problems of government which could be handled properly by state legislation and decried the encroachment of the federal government into such fields.

It must be remembered that those were the days of prohibition, when the federal government had stepped in to regulate from Washington the personal lives and habits of its citizens.

It was that type of unwarranted extension of power into purely state matters that I was opposing. However, an analysis of the occasion and subject in those speeches in which I stressed "State Rights" shows no inconsistency with my advocacy as President of federal legislation covering nationally such subjects as cannot be adequately and properly dealt with by 48 states separately.

In New York, as later in the nation, I was able to accomplish reform and progress only because the public was ready for them, wanted them and was willing to help me carry out the people's will. As governor, it was often necessary for me to appeal for public support over the heads of the legislature and sometimes over the almost united opposition of the newspapers of the state.

In several instances, what was passed by the legislature was literally forced from the Republican leaders by demand of public opinion which never hesitated to make its views known and which found ways of making them known.

General Direction Right Despite Failures

The use of the radio by me in those days not only to appeal directly to the people, but also to describe fully the facts about legislation which were not always given by many press reports, was the beginning of similar use of the radio by me as President in what have come to be known as "fireside chats."

The radio has proved to be a direct contact with the people which was available to only two Presidents before me. It has been invaluable as a means of public approach and will, I know, continue to be so in the years to come.

I do not mean to say that I was always successful with proposed legislation. In much of what I tried to do, I failed.

But the general direction was right.

And that is the really most important contribution which any administration can make to history—to provide direction toward broad objectives, to see that the great mass of people understand the objectives, to make sure that the popular will insists upon them.

In that way changes of administration and shifting of leaders cannot succeed in blocking the march of progress.

Between his first election in November, 1932, and his inauguration in March, 1933, President-elect Roosevelt was invited by President Hoover to confer upon national affairs. Two meetings took place.

In the second article of his story of the New Deal, President Roosevelt tomorrow gives his own version of this historic occasion, states the subjects discussed and discloses some of the differences of viewpoint between him and President Hoover upon the best means of lifting the nation out of its depression.

A HISTORY MAKER

Scenes From His Lifetime

Roosevelt's Life Shows Varied Experience

Franklin Delano Roosevelt was born January 30, 1882, at Hyde Park, N. Y., the son of James and Sara Delano Roosevelt. His earliest education was at home—at the Hyde Park and New York houses of his parents and at their summer place at Campobello Island, N. B.

He had the advantage also of extensive travel. One instance of this was a bicycle tour of Europe with his tutor in 1896, just before he entered Groton School at the age of 14.

At 18 he matriculated at Harvard and was graduated three years later, in 1903.

MARRIED IN 1905

In 1905, when he was 23, he entered Columbia University to study law. In the same year he married his fifth cousin, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. His bride, an orphan, was given away by her uncle, Theodore Roosevelt.

Without his degree, he entered a law firm in 1907. He decided to specialize in maritime law.

His first public office was that of New York state senator in Dutchess county. His election took place in 1910. A year later he first showed himself a reformer in breaking with Tammany.

In 1912, Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected to the state Senate and a year thereafter, in recognition of his work during the campaign for Woodrow Wilson in 1912, was appointed assistant secretary of the navy.

He became the fifth Roosevelt to hold this position and also the youngest.

STRICKEN IN 1921

Until he was stricken with infantile paralysis at Campobello in 1921, he was active in many phases of public affairs. He campaigned for the League of Nations and was nominated for the Vice-Presidency by the Democratic party in 1920. He was defeated and returned to private life as a director of a large insurance company.

It was three years before he was able to overcome his physical affliction to a degree that permitted him to move about.

He was sufficiently well in 1924 to place Al Smith's name in nomination at the Democratic Convention as candidate for President. He repeated the nomination of Smith four years later with the famous "Happy Warrior" speech. In the same year, 1928, he ran successfully for Governor of New York.

He was re-elected two years later and during his second term formed the first "Brain Trust" under the direction of Louis Howe and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman. In June, 1932, the Democratic party nominated Mr. Roosevelt for President and his campaign thereafter was one of the most extensive and vigorous on record.

WINS BY RECORD VOTE

He traveled over 17,000 miles and made over 1000 speeches. In November, he carried 44 of the 48 states, receiving in his election to the Presidency more votes than any other candidate ever had.

Between his election and inauguration he narrowly escaped death by assassination, when his companion at a meeting in Miami, Mayor Cermak, was killed. This was only two weeks before Mr. Roosevelt took office.

He was inaugurated March 4, 1933. He was re-elected in 1936 by a greater majority even than before, carrying every state except Vermont and Maine. The second inauguration took place January 20, 1937, in accordance with the new law setting forward this ceremony to the earliest possible day in the year.

Save Job of U. S. Comptroller, Byrd Urges

Deal Is Vexed by Ban On 'Illegal Spending' Senator Argues

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—Senator Byrd (D.) of Virginia declared today that the comptroller general had earned the displeasure of the administration by stopping what the Virginian called "illegal expenditures."

He urged the Senate not to destroy the office "and give all the powers to prevent illegal government expenditures to the director of the budget, an appointee of the President."

With a final Senate vote on the pegnold executive reorganization bill probable before nightfall, Byrd proposed an amendment which would continue the comptroller general's office, established in 1921.

Byrd's amendment and a move to shelve the bill by sending it back to committee were the major obstacles to Senate disposition of the measure.

Biggest Army Bill Goes to House

WASHINGTON, March 23 (AP)—The House appropriations committee asked Congress today to provide more money for the army than it has in 18 years.

The sum, $447,808,555 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, was $52,943,000 more than the current budget, but $23,730,736 short of the figure for 1920-21, when the army of occupation still was in Germany.

The committee's recommendation was below the budget bureau's estimate, but included almost all of the money President Roosevelt asked in January for anti-aircraft guns, manufacture of machines to produce armaments, and for replenishment of ammunition supplies.

Approximately one-fourth of the total appropriation, $124,000,000, would go to the air corps. The committee said that among other things this fund would provide 476 new planes, bringing the army's total to 3202.

The committee overruled the budget bureau's recommendations in two major instances. It increased the National Guard appropriation $1,335,737 to provide an expansion in enrollment from 200,000 to 205,000 on April 1, 1939.

The committee also recommended that the Citizens' Military Training Camp appropriation remain at $2,275,000, although the budget bureau had proposed cutting it to $1,000,000. The army will train 35,000 youths with the money.

Full Text of Speech By Roosevelt Asking South Wage Boosts

This celebration, the outward and visible commemoration of the rebirth of Gainesville, is more than a symbol of the fine courage which has made it possible for this city to come back after it was in great part destroyed by the tornado of 1936.

These ceremonies touch the interest and life of the whole nation because they typify a citizenship which is latent in the American character, but which too often remains quiescent and too seldom expresses itself.

You were not content to clear away the debris which I, myself, saw as I passed through Gainesville a couple of days after the disaster. You were not content with rebuilding along the lines of the old community. You were not content with throwing yourselves on the help which could be given to you by your state and by the federal government.

BETTERMENT IS AIM

On the contrary, you determined in the process of rebuilding to eliminate old conditions of which you were not proud; to build a better city; to replace congested areas with parks; to move human beings from slums to suburbs. For this reason, the citizens of Gainesville, deserve all possible praise.

It is true that in the planned work of rebuilding you received federal assistance. Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation tells me that they invested nearly one million dollars in Gainesville with the objective of helping to rebuild the city and that he knows of no similar sum which has been used to better advantage.

The Public Works Administration aided in projects for schools, for an almshouse, for a courthouse, for water works and for a jail, and the WPA assisted not only in cleaning up the wreck and taking care of destitute people but also in repairing sewers and sidewalks, street lighting, repaving and parks and schools. But all of those would have been wholly insufficient if you had not provided far greater help from your own ranks in the form of money and in the form of unselfish cooperation.

In the task there has been an essential unanimity in the gift of personal interest and personal service. Few among your citizens have held back. You have met your great needs. They were met in accordance with the democratic principle that those needs should be filled in proportion to the ability of each individual to help.

EXAMPLES CITED

I will tell you that this has a national significance and I want to give you a few illustrations of where and how the application of this principle to national problems would amply solve our national needs.

Today, national progress and national prosperity are being held back chiefly because of selfishness on the part of a few.

If Gainesville had been faced with that type of minority selfishness your city would not stand rebuilt as it is today.

The type of selfishness to which I refer is definitely not to be applied to the overwhelming majority of the American public.

Most people, if they know both sides of a question and are appealed to to support the public good, will gladly lay aside selfishness. But we must admit that there are some people who honestly believe in a wholly different theory of government than the one our Constitution provides.

You known their reasoning. They say that in the competition of life for the good things of life "Some are more successful because they have better brains or are more efficient; the wise, the swift and the strong are able to outstrip their fellowmen. That is nature itself, and it is just too bad if some get left behind."

WRONG ATTITUDE

It is that attitude which leads such people to give little thought to the one-third of our population which I have described as being ill-fed, ill-clad and ill-housed. They say, "I am not my brother's keeper"—and they "pass by on the other side."

Most of them are honest people. Most of them consider themselves excellent citizens.

But this nation will never permanently get on the road to recovery if we leave the methods and the processes of recovery to those who owned the government of the United States from 1921 to 1932.

Those are the kind of people who, in 1936, were saying "oh, yes, we want nobody to starve" but at the same time insist that the balancing of the budget is more important than making appropriations for relief. And when I told them that I, too, wanted to balance the budget but that I put human lives ahead of dollars and handed them the government estimates and asked them just where they would cut the appropriations, inevitably they came back at me and said, "Mr. President, that is not my business, that is yours."

They have the same type of mind as those representative of the people who vote against legislation to help social and economic conditions, provided only that they are for the objectives but do not like the methods and then fail utterly to offer a better method of their own.

BUYING POWER LOW

I speak to you of conditions in this, my own state. The buying power of the people of Georgia and of the people of many other states is still so low today that the people of these states cannot purchase the products of industry. Therefore, industry itself is cut off from an outlet otherwise would have. People cannot buy at stores unless they have cash or good credit. Stores cannot fill their shelves unless they have customers.

Mills and factories cannot sell to stores who have no customers.

I speak not only of the workers in the bottom third of our population—millions of them who cannot afford a suit of clothes. I speak also of millions of other workers who are so underemployed and so underpaid that the burden of their poverty affects the little business man and the big business man and the millionaire himself.

Georgia and the whole lower South may just as well face facts—simple facts presented in the lower South by the President of the United States. The purchasing power of the millions of Americans in this whole area is far too low.

Most men and women who work for wages in this whole area get wages which are far too low. On the present scale of wages and therefore on the present scale of buying power, the South cannot and will not succeed in establishing successful new industries.

EFFICIENCY NEEDED

Efficiency in operating industries goes hand in hand with good pay and the industries of the South can not compete with industries in other parts of the country, the North, and Middle West and the Far West, unless the buying power of the South makes possible the highest kind of efficiency.

And let us well remember that buying power means many other kinds of better things—better schools, better health, better homes, better standards. These things will not come to us in the South if we oppose progress—if we believe in our hearts that the feudal system is still the best system.

When you come down to it, there is little difference between the feudal system and the Fascist system. If you believe in the one, you lean to the other.

With the overwhelming majority of the people of this state, I oppose feudalism. Do so many among those who by virtue of their circumstances in life belong to the most prosperous 5 per cent of the population? Men and women in the professions, the overwhelming majority of the small storekeepers, a growing number of the bankers and business men—they are coming more and more to see that the continuation of the American system calls for the elimination of special privilege, the dissemination of the whole of the truth, and participation in prosperity by the people at the bottom of the ladder, as well as those in the middle and at the top.

CO-OPERATION ASKED

One thing is certain—we are not going back to the old days. We are going forward to better days. We are calling for co-operation all along the line and the co-operation is increasing because more and more people are coming to understand that abuses of the past which have been successfully eradicated are not going to be restored.

To those in and out of public office, who still believe in the feudal system—and believe in it honestly—the people of the United States and in every section of the United States are going to say, "We are sorry, but we want people to represent us whose minds are cast in the 1938 mold and not in the 1888 mould."

To those who come forward—and they are coming in increasing numbers day by day—we say, "We welcome you as co-partners for the good of the whole people and the whole nation." To you we extend the hand of welcome.

Gainesville suffered a great disaster. So did the nation in those eight years of false prosperity followed by four years of collapse. Gainesville showed a united front against the good of its whole population, rich and poor alike. It rose to rebuild on sounder lines.

The United States is rising and is rebuilding on sounder lines. We propose to go forward and not backs.

Roosevelt Backs Alien Built Ships

WASHINGTON, March 23 (INS)—President Roosevelt today announced his readiness to contract with foreign builders for the construction of American merchant ships if Congress votes the necessary legislation.

The President indicated he was influenced in part by the fact that big American built ships have failed to pay their way.

He revealed that American shipbuilders have set a price of $400 a ton whereas the traffic could only support vessels costing around $150 a ton.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Full of Vim!

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Exclusive:

AMBASSADOR JOSEPH P. KENNEDY was pledged a "substantial amount" as a contribution to a fund for the establishment of an East Boston hospital with a charity clinic . . . The American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, in one of the first letters reaching Boston on the letterhead of the American Embassy, has instructed Dr. James H. Strong, who was the Kennedy family physician when it resided in East Boston, to call on the Ambassador's local fiscal agent when plans for the new East Boston relief station are ready . . . In his letter, Ambassador Kennedy spoke fondly of his native East Boston, and pledged his support to Dr. Strong.

Within a few days, a compromise settlement will be made by the Federal National Bank in suits brought by the State Banking department on behalf of four closed state institutions . . . Dr. Joseph Santuosso will be a candidate for lieutenant-governor . . . And if Mayor James S. Coffey of Salem does not announce his candidacy for attorney-general, this column will be surprised.

Collector of Customs Joseph M. Grish may not relinquish his job as chairman of the Democratic state committee . . . If he does, David J. McCarthy of Medford, assistant director of the commercial motor vehicle division of the public utilities department, has the call as his successor . . . Much politics is involved in this matter, however . . . An indication that McGrath may not step out as chairman is that he will take his highly efficient secretary, Miss Mary Corkery, who has served under several headships of the Democratic party locally, with him to the Custom House . . . To hundreds of prominent politicians the foregoing bit of news will be interesting.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

The mouse who forged the name of Peggy Wood to a letter addressed to this department will probably get a lecking, although this lover of peace would appreciate it if the mouch is let alone . . . For a lesson in legal—and verbal—pyrotechnics, a court meeting between former Congressman Joseph F. Conforti, for the defense, and U. S. Atty. William T. McCarthy is always interesting . . . The last one before Commissioner Harry N. Guterman was a dandy . . . Big tax dodgers will be hearing soon from a new batch of undercover agents.

Some of the names in the cast of "Mr. Moto's Gamble," the new co-feature with "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" at the Met, are: Keye Luke, Lynn Bari, Jayne Regan, Harold Huber, an unique assortment . . . Then there is Maxie Rosenbloom . . . The spring rounding of local "stills" is on in the state, with the newest section under sharpest surveillance . . . Nye Maybew's wife is an honor pupil at Leland Powers School.

Mrs. Eleanor Breen, wife of the city superintendent of supplies, gives with a rave on the subject of pianoforte as taught at the Phil Saltman Academy in the Back Bay . . . That new gown Mrs. Breen is wearing is described by her husband, who supervises El Morocco of evenings, as "the family's new screen porch." . . . Plum-color is the shade the hosiery boys are pugging . . . Tommy Dorsey raises eggs.

The Mezzanine Coffee Grill is the new stoking rendezvous at the Bradford, and the beguiling Signor Joseph di Pesa is promising the local drink and dance department that there will be "some adverting" of the room coming soon . . . The voluble Signor's grandchild, Joe Longo, who is now press-agent for United Artists, was blessed with a second son yesterday. The proud papa, spoofing, averred that the child will be titled Quits . . . Fred Allen's father-in-law, if it really is named his seventh daughter Lest One—and this is gospel. Hot Potland Steffa Allen had another baby sister after that.

Pete Fitzgerald and his orchestra, and Joseph A. Cromen, the master of ceremonies, have been engaged for the 5th Annual Frolics of the Boston Newspapermen's Association. April 18 is the date—at the Copley Plaza . . . Anton Brachi, the Sino photographer, just added to the rating of the famous Steichem with his signature to a full-page on the inside front cover of the current Cosmopolitan.

Star Role To Tyrone Power

'Life of Jesse James' Will Follow 'Suez' With Arliss

HOLLYWOOD, March 23—Tyrone Power told me when he first came to Hollywood he didn't want to be typed. Small danger of that happening with the widely different roles Darryl Zanuck has lined up for his boy wonder.

Ty steps first (May 2, to be exact) into "Suez" where you will see him as Ferdinand De Lesseps, the young engineer, with George Arliss playing his famed Disraeli. Then comes the greatest adventure of Power's life, the starring role in "The Life of Jesse James."

After three years 20th Century-Fox has managed to clear the rights to the life of America's No. 1 bandit with the James heirs. The exteriors will be filmed in Kansas where a railway will be erected for the famous train robberies. The history of Jesse James should make an all time high in western thrillers for the exploits of the James Brothers were more exciting than any fiction.

When we saw the personable Hank Lusetti playing basketball with the Stanford team against U. S. C. we wondered why some studio didn't sign him up for the movies. For our money Hank is more than just another basketball athlete. He has personality and temperament which should come in very handy when he turns movie star for now comes word that Paramount has put him under contract. The basketball champ is due in Hollywood as soon as he graduates from Stanford in June. Para has already lined up his first picture, "Campus Confessions."

Charles Bickford, red-headed hero man of the screen, is back among us after a try on the stage in "Casey Jones." Charlie had a run of bad luck for a time as will be interesting news to his fans that he checks in immediately at Republic for a dual role in "Gangs of New York."

A reunion of old timers is promised with James Cruze directing and Nancy Carroll being sought for the lead.

A Line or Two: Clark Gable is still taking ribs on the long woolen underwear he wore on his Mexican hunting trip because he heard the nights were cold. But he took it off when the temperature hit a hundred . . . Louis Bromfield has done business a second time within the week with 20th Century-Fox. Last week Darryl Zanuck purchased the film rights to his novel, "Then the Rains Came," and now it's his Cosmopolitan serial, "Bitter Lotus."

Snapshots of Hollywood

COUNTESS DI FRASSO back in town . . . Dining with the CARY GRANTS and PHYLLIS BROOKS; VIRGINIA BRUCE, eleven pounds thinner, attributes it to her picture work and not dieting; BUDDY EBSEN resentful over losing his mop of hair, only partially comforted when told he could raise a beard for "Yellow Jack"; TOMMY FARR, the British fighter, at Warners with his bride-to-be, EILEEN WENZEL; ARLINE JUDGE may cancel her 20th Century-Fox contract. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

It's Eye Study Hour at Loew's

Colbert-Cooper Film Merry Hit at the Met

By PEGGY DOYLE

There's teeth in that there "Lubitsch touch" you'll discover when you view that celebrated provoker, "Bluebeard's Eighth Metropolitan.

And we don't only mean the beautiful, pearly ones lovely Claudette Colbert sinks into handsome Gary Cooper's leg in a tempestuous moment. We give you, too, that unexpected first meeting when the lovers-at-first-sight battled over a pair of pajamas in a department store; the interlude when Cooper takes Claudette across his knees and gives her the spanking of her life and that final indignity when the charming Colbert locks Bridegroom Cooper in a straitjacket before making love to him.

• • •

Save the waits for Hollywood's old-fashioned directors, the advanced Producer-Director Lubitsch prefers movie romances a la swing-time. Romantic clinches, he says, are dated; audiences want the unexpected—and so-o-o the Keystone wooing with the ermine lining. Subtle! Subtle as a sledge-hammer, Lubitsch, briefly removing the inevitable cigar from his mouth, will tell you himself.

Let him have it his own way so long as he continues to distinguish his productions as with the justly celebrated Lubitsch touch.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," adapted from Alfred Savoir's Continental hit play, is a happy partnership for Cooper and Colbert. Europe's most glamorous resorts provide the platinum background for this new high in rough-and-tumble romance.

The charm of the principals, the skill of the director and the sophisticated gloss of the setting combine to make this smarky dialogued script supremely entertaining.

"Mr. Deeds" Cooper and Claudette ("I Met Him In Paris") Colbert, so well-met in this current screen engagement, are supported by an excellent cast.

There is, for one, that amusing Edward Everett Horton, entirely credible as Claudette's marquis-papa. David Niven, as the orchidaceous young woman's inevitable swain, completely cancels his English nativity in this most convincing French portrayal. Elizabeth Patterson's Aunt (DON'T call her grandma!) Hedwige makes a brief but potent contribution. Herman Bing's broad humor and Franklin Pangborn's more subtle wit are definite assets.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" and Bluebeard, as screwy a Juliet and Romeo as the movies offers this season, are well worth your acquaintance. Go up and see them some time this week—or sooner—at the Met.

Nicole de Loiselle	Claudette Colbert
Michael Brandon	Gary Cooper
The Marquis de Loiselle	Edward Everett Horton
Albert de Regnier	David Niven

Hub Reduces Price Scale

William Powell and Carole Lombard in "My Man Godfrey," a gay, modern comedy based on the Eric Hatch novel, together with "Internes Can't Take Money," starring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, make up the new program at the Hub Theatre, beginning tomorrow.

"My Man Godfrey," reveals Powell as a "forgotten man," being brought to a very ritzy party by Carole Lombard in order that she may win first prize in a "Scavenger Hunt." Then she engages Powell as the butler and the fun takes on a merry pace.

Carole Lombard

The Hub Theater also announces a reduced scale of admission prices, effective tomorrow. From Monday to Friday, inclusive, the price will be 15 cents for all seats until 6 p. m., with a 25 cent price prevailing evenings. The Saturday and Sunday scale has also been lowered.

CHAPTER 21

As breakfast drew to a close, Sir George Pakenham lit a cigarette and, rising before his chair, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, by this evening a—er—business matter important to several of us present will—er—in all probability have been satisfactorily completed.

"Since we will no doubt—er—feel like celebrating, I suggest you all join me for dinner at Tom Moore's Inn. I fancy we will have time for this before we attend the—er—Gombey dances which Mrs. Grafton has so kindly arranged for us to watch."

He bowed a little in Barbara's direction. "Does the suggestion meet with your approval?"

Barbara hesitated. "Why—why, this is very nice of you, but—"

"Oh, Barbie, don't be a stick-in-the-mud all your life!" Barney snapped, then covered up hastily. "After all it will be grand fun and the servants need a rest. A change of scene will do us all good."

Kathleen's smouldering look sought Gail are she cried, "All those in favor raise a hand." And she set the example by raising both of hers.

"Well make a real night of it," Sir George promised. "So I'll get on the phone pretty soon."

"The police are here, Mr. Grafton."

"Why, what in the world can they want?" Barbara demanded tight lipped.

"Oh, it's probably only some technicality with regard to poor Miss Fortier's death," James supplied. "What say we go and throw out the welcome mat?"

JUDY ALIVE!

"Not a bad idea," was Sir George's reaction.

"If you please, sir," the butler hesitated. "Inspector Boyd wishes to speak to Major Allenby. I showed him into the library, sir." He explained to Grafton. "I hope that was all right."

Both of their expressions were grave in the extreme as Allenby closed the door behind him and said, "I'm sorry. Something has just turned up to change the whole aspect of the case."

"Judy Fortier is not dead! I'll stake my reputation on it."

"Not dead?" Lunt gasped.

"Why—why—what?"

From his pocket Allenby produced the package which had so recently come to upset all his careful arrived at calculations. "This, unless greatly mistaken, contains another deck of cards, a means by which the Fortier sisters communicated in their school days. I propose we open it."

"With any luck I should be able to tell very soon whether we're going to be able to make this out—or not." Major Allenby predicted as, watched by Inspector Boyd and Lunt, the ever impassive constable, he proceeded to open the parcel.

As he fully expected, it contained a deck of cards, but to his chagrin, secured about them was a rubber band and caught beneath it was a greasy little scrap of brown paper such as might have been torn from a paper bag. On it was written in an unsteady hand, "Use our school arrangement."

ANOTHER MYSTERY

A four-letter curse escaped Allenby.

"I'm afraid it's no use," he said, "but I'll try the system I used on the other deck."

"Other deck?"

"Yes." And forthwith Allenby seated himself at the desk, rapidly arranging the cards. At last he looked up from a meaningless checkering of sticks.

"Well," Boyd remarked, "that doesn't look like much. Any hope?"

"At the end of two or three days we might get it if we work steadily. Provided you can find where this package was mailed, I don't feel it's fatal that we can't read this message. Do you think you can trace the package?"

"These islands aren't so big, sir. We'll have a serious go at it."

"All right. Incidentally, I suggest that you inquire for someone who has been seriously ill."

"Sick?" The constable looked his surprise. "How can you tell that?"

"The handwriting. Notice how unsteady it is? And since the wrapping is so coarse I wouldn't waste time looking around any fashionable district."

"Right-o—By the bye, here are your newspapers."

"Thanks. What about my photos?"

"Not yet, sir, but we'll get them later."

"Thanks." Allenby said and then, curiously enough, dropped the newspapers out of sight behind a row of books.

"By the way, there's something else, sir." Boyd held out an envelope.

"Here's an enlargement of the photo made by our photographer of that little bunch of feathers found on Miss Fortier's dressing gown lapel. None of us could make anything of it until the superintendent remembered a famous explorer who is living on the island this fall."

"Explorer?"

"Yes, Carveth Wells. You've heard of him of course."

"Of course. That was a bit of luck. What did you do?"

"I took the feathers directly to Mr. Wells. Almost at once he said they were an imitation of a West African killing Wanga."

JUNGLE MAGIC

Boyd's dark head inclined. "Yes, and a crude one, too. Mr. Wells went on to say that a Wanga is a voodoo symbol, known all along the Gulf of Guinea. He also pointed out that Wangas are in common use in Haiti and some of the other West Indies. It's a sort of an evil charm."

Although Allenby was tolerably familiar with the Legba, Dutch Guiana and several other voodoo rituals, he merely nodded. Nobody loves a wise guy.

"Good work," he said. "Wells' opinion casts a new complexion on Patricia's death."

Constable Lunt nodded quickly. "Say, Inspector, I suppose you know several of the Gombeys are West Indian?"

"Yes, I know. That's why I didn't like finding this."

Inspector Boyd turned to Allenby. "Do you know, sir, whether there are any Gombeys in the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Grafton?"

"Oh Creepy, eh?"

The way Boyd spoke piqued Allenby's curiosity, and shortly he learned that, although Creepy had not been in trouble for many years, he had once served a term for inserting a knife between the ribs of a colored gentleman who had displeased him.

"Yes, I know, but he seems to have a good reputation with the Graftons."

FIND JUDY!

"They are fond of him. He worked for the first Mrs. Grafton's family. Lord knows how long. Nevertheless I think we will invite this Creepy chap over to St. George's for an interview with the superintendent."

"I wish you wouldn't," Allenby urged. "The situation here is so extremely delicate I don't want certain people alarmed any more than they have to be."

In this instance, however, Inspector Boyd was polite but insistent.

"Sorry, major, but Creepy Smith will have to come along. His record isn't of the clearest, you know."

"Could I see that picture of the Wanga again?" Allenby asked. "Um. Notice the knot? It's significant I think."

"Why, major?"

"Possibly it's an indication as to who might have tied it. And see the way those feathers are trimmed? Doesn't it strike you a little odd that they should be such stiff feathers, and so carefully trimmed?"

Constable Lunt shook his head and laughed a little. "Oh, it's just some African nonsense."

Boyd wasn't so sure. "I wonder. It might well mean something."

Since there was nothing else he could do, Allenby gave in with seeming good grace, saying, "I can't impress you too earnestly on the necessity of finding Judy Fortier's hideout as quickly as possible. Her story may explain everything with regard to her sister's death."

The constable scratched a frankly bewildered head.

"I've been on the Force eight years," said he "and I never seen anything to touch this. Well, Inspector, shall I go pick up Creepy?"

"Yes, and I'm going with you since that lad's so free with his cutlery."

Clip the Camera Clues

"Nothing, Inspector Boyd merely wished to make a few more inquiries about my discovery of Miss Fortier's body."

"Everything's all right, isn't it?" Kathleen asked.

"Oh, quite, quite," replied the C. I. D. man in such convincing tones that Inspector Boyd rose several pegs higher in Roger Allenby's estimation.

"Well, gentlemen, we're off—for the last time, let's hope." And he preceded Constable Lunt to the door.

Terry ran a nervous finger inside his collar, loosening it. "Funny their coming back like that," he sighed.

"Well, Barney, I suppose we'd all better settle down to our conference," Ward suggested once the police had departed.

"Right," Sir George agreed. "I'll get my notes."

CREEPY'S THREAT

Certainly the Peguots' descendant was in a white-hot temper, but Constable Lunt effectively persuaded him that it would be pleasanter to go to St. George's than to be taken.

"When I finds de man what put dis on me," the boatman raged, "he be sorry!"

"That sort of talk will get you nothing but trouble, my lad," Inspector Boyd warned in an effective voice.

"Provided you can establish an alibi, everything will be all right and there's no harm done. Now come along."

Sir George remained largely silent, Allenby non-committal, as Ward made his points with Grafton adding information from time to time.

All through the morning the discussion raged and the array of documents, blueprints, graphs and agreements covering the table grew to snowdrift dimensions.

By 11 the wastebasket was overflowing with scribbled estimates and, to Sir George's evidence distaste, lunch was sent in on a tray.

CARVETH WELLS (right) telling INSPECTOR BOYD about the West African killing Wanga . . .

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Starshine for Your Eyes

EYES CAN TELL the loveliest tales in the world . . . the delight you feel, the mischief and laughter that bubbles through you, the complete and utter ecstasy . . . these flash in and out, volatile as the emotions . . . so don't ever, ever let the mirror-clearness of your eyes be dulled by shadows.

Franciska Gaal is one of the new movie finds whose eyes are remarkably expressive. Arline Gould today tells of a shadow-dispelling beauty aid which will never let you down when you want to tell enchanting stories with your eyes . . .

'Under-Eye Pencil' Clears Away All Shadows

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU CAN'T expect anyone to breathe rapturously, con moto and con amore. "One look and I've forgotten the gloom of the past . . ." if the sparkle of your eyes is robbed by shadows, and they look listless as a guppie's.

When migraines were in fashion, shadows were "violet smudges under the eyes." Today they're nothing but uncomplimentary rings. The smart girl would rather see rings on the mahogany of her new grand piano than rings under her eyes.

One of the best known cosmeticians, who has a talent for concocting nifty things that you put on your face to give a glamorously fresh look has just brought out an eyebrow pencil.

It hasn't a particle of drying quality to it, and truly enough it goes on like a fine spray of pearly mist, even though it is in lipstick form.

If you've been letting your nights out as an occasional temporary indisposition shadow the clearness of your glance, it's a shame. And don't let it happen again!

* * *

Encased in an ivory and gold cylinder that's smart enough for the party bag of the season's slag-line panicker, it can go with you unobtrusively on week-ends or, if you're that lucky, on the Easter Bermuda jaunt.

It is used as a preliminary in makeup. Simply rub it lightly with the fingertips on the shadowed spots. You'll see the circles lightened immediately, and your eyes fairly blaze by comparison. Superficial skin imperfections are wafted away.

As a matter of fact, the sweet-scented stick is a perfect a blemish or scar cover-up as you'll find in many long days of searching.

For a dazzling evening make-up, when you want to have your skin to look as though it were bathed in milk, mix with a little of the under-eye pencil to use under the eyes, the misty foundation lotion we've mentioned—which is a little masterpiece. Then finish off all over the face and neck with the same foundation. The two will blend in exquisite delicacy, smooth as summer clouds.

* * *

If you'd like to know more about the new under-eye pencil which will not only banish circles, but also cover other blemishes and even scars with gossamer finish, phone Arline Gould, LIBert 4000, week-days until 5, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Listen, World!

Think of Your Tantrums

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I've a quick temper. And am as dangerously impulsive in my enthusiasms. Always getting excited about something. Pitching headlong into campaigns and crusades . . . bankrupting myself in orgies of generosity . . . then having a hard time mopping up the unpleasant consequences.

"HIGH STRUNG"—that's how people have always labeled tempestuous creatures like me, figuring that "we're just born that way and can't do anything about it."

Which is as convenient an alibi for self-indulgence as ever was invented . . . and the slickest racket for selfishness, cowardice and conceit.

No wonder the notion's so popular with ornery humans who can't be bothered to Act Regular—and want a lot of special consideration.

To whom I was no exception. My proud parents having mistaken smartiness for genius, I proceeded to cash in on their error. So Tantrums, for years, were my Pet Dish.

Or Melancholy Moments—with the whole family in the Dog House because they'd failed to appreciate my Noble Nature.

Sick Headaches, also, could be induced with little effort—and a tremulous Hint of Suicide was good for gobs of De Luxe coddling.

Yes, I certainly worked the High-Strung Racket to a fare-ye-well, as many others are doing. Not because there was anything unique about my afflictions or reactions, but simply because I had a human craving for the spotlight and had hit on a swell method of getting it . . . a method denied to ordinary gals who just wash clothes instead of scribbling sonnets.

And it seemed to be working. By various emotional devices, I was being let off from all sorts of unpleasant things which I didn't like—and achieving plenty of gratifying results which I did. Until, by racket, this business of Throwing-Myself-Around, either in anger or ecstasy, certainly seemed to be succeeding.

BUT IT WASN'T—NOT REALLY!

Yes, I had my friends and family stumped. But as for me, myself, the system was a flop. Instead of feeling thrilled with triumph after my emotional exhibitions, I felt weary and washed-up . . . burnt-out and bored.

Something must be wrong somewhere.

SOMETHING WAS! As I speedily discovered when I began to do a little constructive reading in physiology and psychology. Here I'd been thinking (with 23,000,000 other Hysterical Hatties) that Feelings were Mysterious Things you couldn't control. Now I found that Emotion is no more mysterious than Digestion.

Emotion is simply a form of energy generated by our glands, exactly as the power we read or rife by is generated by mechanical batteries. And just as we can control and conserve light or motion, so we can control and conserve hate and fear, delight and love, desire or revulsion.

In short, FEELINGS are actual ENERGY . . . "WATTS," such as are recorded in any basement meter.

But they are infinitely more expensive than the watts you consume in your kitchen range or neon sign. IF YOU USE TOO MANY COOKING OR ADVERTISING WATTS, YOU MERELY BANKRUPT YOUR POCKET-BOOK. BUT IF YOU USE TOO MANY EMOTIONAL WATTS, YOU BURN UP YOUR LIFE.

Don't do it! The next time you're tempted to indulge in a tantrum or a fit of blues, STOP and THINK of the consequences.

YOU ARE WASTING YOURSELF. YOU ARE WASTING THE MOST PRECIOUS PRODUCT YOU HAVE IN AN UTTERLY SENSELESS DISPLAY.

With those "watts" you might recharge yourself, regain your lost youth and charm . . . win new friends, start new adventures, create new beauty . . . REMAKE YOUR LIFE. And instead—

Finish it for yourself. And decide whether you're a "High Strung Genius" or—A PLAIN "NUT."

P. S.—If you want to read more about this, get Louis Berman's "GLANDS REGULATING PERSONALITY." There's a book that's guaranteed to change any life that touches it. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., publishers.)

Easy Tap Routines

Don't shake your head when we say you can tap like this. If we could show you a slow-motion picture of a typical tap dance you'd quickly see that you can!

You'd see that the snappy dancers who dazzle you at parties and shows, do over and over again six easy steps—which they combine in different ways.

In one evening you could teach yourself those six steps from diagrams—and after that what's to stop you from practicing a few tricky dances and being a hit at parties yourself?

To do the Straight Tap, you stand on one foot, strike the floor sharply with the ball of the other foot. For the Front Tap, lift one foot back off the floor, swing it forward, striking the floor with the ball of the foot. For the Back Tap, reverse.

Just as easy to do the other tap steps—and you can have fun doing them right from the start. Fit them to your favorite tunes, combine them according to simple instructions and keep in mind what a grand surprise you're preparing for your friends. Why not show 'em by tapping when your turn comes to "shine" in the Big Apple?

With our 40-page booklet, "Self-Instruction in Tap Dancing," you go quickly from the basic steps into practice combinations—then into the full-length buck and waltz routines which make you tops at parties and entertainments. Diagrams, simple instructions show you how to place your feet, fit steps to music.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Self-Instruction in Tap Dancing," to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 169 West 18th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Walking Helps Beautify Your Figure

By IDA JEAN KAIN

WHATEVER our own occupation we are likely to think it is the reason for all our figure troubles. The housewife's work is never done and she has no time for exercise.

The secretary blames her hipline inches on a desk chair job . . . and even a figure columnist has a pretty tough time living up to her own advice!

There for recreation we go to a theater or concert and envy the glamorous creatures who have nothing to do but keep beautiful. Take the concert pianist—all she has to do is practice six to eight hours a day. She is practically tied to the piano bench! And sitting adds to a pianist's hip inches at the same rate it does to a stenographer's.

Hortense Monath, the slender, graceful Newark, New Jersey, girl who ranks as one of the outstanding concert pianists says she has to reckon seriously with the hazard of her chosen career. As a woman performer she has to have eye appeal as well as ear appeal. She must present a graceful carriage and slender figure as she wends on and off the stage.

Delightful Sea Food Dishes For Lent

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

DOWN TO THE sea we go for our inspiration for Lenten recipes. And something of the sea remains in the foods we get from it—something fresh and invigorating as a sea breeze in the flavors of the shellfish.

There is something so novel, so unusual, about these valuable foods that their use snaps meal planning out of its routine and makes the eyes of every member of the family light up with pleasure.

For a real treat, try combining two or three shellfish in one dish. Held together by a rich, buttery cream sauce, the flavors of shrimps, oysters and crabmeat are blended to delightful perfection. If you don't like oysters, try this recipe anyhow, using just shrimp and crabmeat. You'll be sure to like the combination.)

SEAFOOD CASSEROLE

1 lb. fresh shrimps
1 pint oysters
1 6½ oz. tin crabmeat
¼ cup butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped parsley
1½ tablespoons chopped chives
1 teaspoon salt
6 thick slices tomato, peeled

Drop shrimps into boiling water and boil for 15 minutes. Drain and remove husks and dark vein down back. Drain oysters, reserving liquor and remove any bits of shell. Flake crabmeat and pick out cartilage. Place in layers in buttered casserole, shrimps on bottom, then oysters, then crabmeat.

Melt butter in saucepan, blend in flour, and add milk and oyster liquor, cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients except tomatoes and pour sauce over fish in casserole. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Meanwhile brush tomato slices with butter and broil on one side until almost tender; pare broiled side down over top of casserole, continue cooking until tomatoes are tender, about 10 minutes. Serves 6

SUNDAY NIGHT CRABMEAT DISH

2 6½ oz. cans crabmeat
2 cups thick white sauce
½ lb. grated American cheese
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 medium size green pepper
1 small can sliced mushrooms
Salt and pepper
1 uncooked pie crust
Cracker crumbs
Butter

Make white sauce in double boiler. Blend grated cheese into sauce, stirring until smooth. Add celery salt and chopped green pepper. Then add the flaked crabmeat and sliced mushrooms. Season to taste. Cover. Pour the mixture into a deep baking dish which has been lined with the unbaked pie crust. Cover with cracker crumbs and bits of butter. Bake in moderately hot oven 375 degrees F. until brown. Serve hot. May be made in small individual pie dishes. Serves six.

CRAB BISQUE

1 6½-oz. can crabmeat
2 cups milk
1 cup chicken broth or hot water in which one chicken bouillon cube has been dissolved.
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
¼ tsp. salt
Few grains paprika
Whipped cream

Remove bones and chop crabmeat fine. Cook crabmeat and milk together in double boiler until milk is scalded. Melt butter, blend in flour to a smooth paste, slowly add chicken broth, stir until it boils. Add seasoning. Serve on each portion of soup one heaping teaspoon whipped cream seasoned with salt and paprika. Serves six.

PREMIERE CRABMEAT SALAD

1 6½-oz. can crabmeat
6 medium size tomatoes
½ cup stuffed olives or pecans, chopped
½ cup celery, cut in small pieces
Mayonnaise dressing
Lettuce or watercress
Paprika

Remove top of tomatoes, and take out the pulp, sprinkle with salt and invert to drain. Combine flaked and boned crabmeat, celery and chopped olives or nut meats. Mix with mayonnaise dressing to moisten. Fill the hollowed-out tomatoes with mixture and place on lettuce or watercress. Put 1 teaspoon of mayonnaise on top of each tomato and sprinkle with paprika. Serves 6.

CRABMEAT BROCCOLI

2 6½-oz. cans crabmeat
1 bunch broccoli
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup grated cheese
1½ cups milk

Boil broccoli stems and small leaves of broccoli until tender, chop into medium small pieces. Place in buttered baking dish, alternating layers of broccoli and crabmeat which has been boned and flaked, using crabmeat for top layer. Make white sauce: Melt butter, add flour to form a smooth paste, and milk and seasonings, stir and cook until thick. Pour sauce over prepared dish of crabmeat and broccoli, sprinkle top with grated cheese. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.), for 20 minutes. Serves 6.

Rococo Touch in Knits

IF YOU KNOW your "Town and Country" and your lovely ladies of the International set through the so-intimate peeks of the settings of their private lives that they allow to fliter into the fashion journals . . . you can't help but be aware of this "rococo" trend that repeats itself in plaster swags surrounding six-foot mirror squares, or even as the Paris-inspired edging of a knit you can turn out with your own clever fingers! It's a splendid touch in fashion, and if you have a taste for it, you'll appreciate this new knit suit. Or even if you simply recognize its charming femininity, you'll go for the rococo. The jacket is a cut-away, molded to the waistline you should have. And the edge ornamentation is done with braid. Single crochet and picots really simulate the braid. This contrast is another how in the direction of poly-color effects. You might try navy or black with white, beige with green, or eggshell with sinnia for new-looking combinations. I'd wear a Tyrolean felt with the beige or green, and perhaps a baku mushroom-brim bonnet with the dark-and-white. If you'd like knitting directions for this suit, write Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, and inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Married Comrades

CHAPTER 581

WHEN, AFTER a pause that held my nerves painfully taut, Allen Drake answered my explanation of Katie's meddling.

"Then, I gather," he said, "that you do not consider your Katie's 'snooping'—I am eternally grateful to your mother-in-law for that delightfully descriptive word—ought to bar her from sharing the vital secrets of your father's expedition?"

"My thoughts, sentiments or beliefs can have no possible bearing upon the question," I said stiffly. "We all, Katie included, know that, in my father's place, you are in absolute command of this trying affair. What you tell any of us about it should be decided by yourself alone."

"And will be."

"I may safely assume that anything I may tell you or Mrs. Underwood about your father's plans will not reach Katie's ears?"

"Good!" he returned. "That is what I wished to know. And that spoons of Katie. You may rest assured I shall say nothing further about her trespassing, either to her or to you. Unless, of course"—he added sternly—"she does it again."

"I will also guarantee her refraining from all meddling while you are here," I said.

"Then," he said, smiling, "having disposed of our tiny sheepfest, let us turn to larger matters. Do you know where I can get hold of either of the Veritsens, father or son, or both?"

"Ah!" I preached. "Then what Philip Veritsen is doing has some mysterious connection with my father's mission, after all."

"That I cannot tell you."

"Will you kindly tell me everything you know of what Philip Veritsen and Noel are doing?" he asked.

"And I will get those from 'your' men," he made the words a quotation, "when they return. But before then I must have all possible threads in my hands. Will you please make haste and tell me everything you know of the latest Veritsen activities? We haven't much time, you know. Miss Whitlock will be calling me into the house pretty soon in order to preserve the verities.

Many Diseases Not Hereditary Says Doctor

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

HEREDITY PLAYS an important part in the transmission of certain diseases. But, let me point out, because some member of your family has cancer you need not think you must have it.

If one or both parents died at an early age, there is no reason to assume that the offspring will be deprived of a long span of life.

The accumulation of statistical data has always been of great interest to the medical profession. By the study of such material certain popular beliefs have been proven false, while others have been confirmed. Unfortunately, a great deal of this information has been wrongly applied.

Many persons believe they will be carried away by a certain disease merely because one of their parents or grandparents had it. This is an unnecessary mental burden to carry.

The fact is, a good many persons have deprived themselves of needed medical attention because they feared they might find themselves victims of hereditary disease. This foolish practice has led to a great deal of unnecessary suffering. Indeed, serious complications have occurred which otherwise would have been prevented.

Of course, I do not mean to imply that heredity and hereditary disease must be ignored. But we must be sensible about these things. If a certain disease has existed in your family for many generations, it is well that you be familiar with this fact.

But this does not mean that you are doomed and medical consultation is useless. Bear in mind that many of the disturbances to which our forefathers succumbed were little understood and often erroneously diagnosed.

It is a well known fact that persons who are afflicted with certain chronic disorders and who take the necessary precautionary measures often outlive those who have rarely been ill.

The healthy individual fears nothing and as a result of his confidence rarely frequently indulges in strenuous exhausting and debilitating practices. He subjects his body to [illegible] stress and strain and [illegible] suffers the penalty of ill [illegible]

Take Time to Plot Bridge Plays

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In almost every situation, a player will be doing himself no injury if he takes the time to think out his proper course.

Sometimes, however, any perceptible hesitation is fatal in that it telegraphs the position of key cards to the other players.

In the hand shown below [illegible] made a good hold-up play, but the fact that he "went into a huddle" about it notified any good results it might have had.

North, dealer

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♣	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's three heart bid was on the opening side suit, considering his original pass, was not without [illegible]

West opened the diamond ten [illegible] Dummy's jack was played, East [illegible] declarer won with the ace. The club jack was led and passed. East started to win the trick with his queen, then changed his mind, replaced the card in his hand and merely followed with the deuce. Declarer said "oh, is that so" and promptly abandoned the club suit.

At the third trick he led a low spade toward dummy's jack. East won with the queen and returned a diamond. But the fat was in the fire! Declarer found a good break in the spade suit and rattled off four spades and the ace and king of hearts, which, incidentally, set the club trick previously stolen, and the ace-queen of diamonds, totaled the tricks, and contract.

East's hesitation and failure to take the club queen had really been a double error. He could have taken it and, by returning a diamond, defeated the contract, since declarer never could have made more than four club tricks, two spades and two diamonds.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A correspondent writes me and inquires: "How is it that a man may be legally married in one state, cross the border into the next, and discover he is living in sin, and his children are illegitimate?"

Why, indeed? This business of having different divorce laws in almost every state would seem to take a Grade "A" prize in a crazy world, where we all seem to be playing at cross purposes.

As Louis A. Stone of the Legal Aid Bureau of the Educational Alliance, a philanthropic institution on the Lower East Side of New York City, has pointed out, "The rich can take a flying trip to Reno or Paris and relieve themselves of unwanted spouses. But the average person finds the situation almost impossible."

Personally, I am against divorce—always have been. But if we must have this calamity, let us not have laws that tend to make it even worse than it is.

Not a day passes but dozens of letters come to this column protesting against the divorce situation in this country, which, with its different laws, entails unhappiness, often loss of legal status, and always expense.

CHILDREN SUFFER

My correspondent's question brings to mind a case where a first wife sued to break the will of her former husband, claiming the State in which she lived did not recognize his grounds for divorce. And therefore his remarriage was illegal.

The New York State legislature has adopted the Uniform Sales Act. The Negotiable Instruments Law to protect the interests of business men of this country.

NOTHING, HOWEVER, HAS BEEN DONE TOWARD THE ADOPTION OF A UNIFORM DIVORCE LAW. The same is true in other states.

Limiting divorces to but one ground—that of infidelity—in various states has resulted in a shameful type of racketeering. Collusive divorces are planned every day.

Everyone knows of the situation which has been used as a comedy element in plays, novels, films, [illegible] but nothing has been done to remedy it.

The whole thing is disgusting. Attractive young women are hired to put on negligees, take down their hair if it hasn't been bobbed, and present a well-simulated deshabille. The dissolute little drama staged in cold blood is ready and waiting when the witnesses burst in and find the indifferent couple, who have probably never exchanged 10 words. LEGALLY COMPROMISED.

FOR RICH ONLY

The solution, of course, would be a uniform divorce law applicable in all states—that is, if we MUST have divorces.

There has been some talk among various women's societies about getting up a commission appointed to study the problem and make a prompt report, but nothing tangible has been done up to the present time.

A REPORTER AT THE PAPAL COURT

by THOMAS B. MORGAN

At the age of 61, men usually have their careers behind them. But that was not so with Monsignor Ratti, prefect of the Vatican Library. Reluctantly but obediently he accepted Pope Benedict's appointment as the first Apostolic Visitor to war-torn Poland in 1918

CHAPTER 18

The Apostolic Visitor labored in the midst of great political and economic confusion. This turmoil was bound to have its effect upon the morale of the Polish people.

Suffering was intense and there was left to the bishops of Great Lotosk in 1918 a task to await the outcome of the war before any objectives was definitely decided.

A Nunciature was established in Warsaw that June and Achille Ratti was made the first nuncio. Soon that office, according to custom, required the rank of archbishop. Pope Benedict appointed him Titular Archbishop of Lepanto, with which he assumed a purely episcopal precedence.

He desired that his consecration take place in Poland and asked the Pope to grant this permission. Benedict XV consented and Achille Ratti was consecrated in the War Cathedral on October 28, 1919.

FIRST BIG STEP

Monsignor Kakowski, Archbishop of Warsaw, and now a cardinal was the consecrator. The ceremony was attended by Marshal Pilsudski, the members of the Polish cabinet, bishops from all over Poland and the diplomatic representatives of the powers.

It was the first ceremonial of the career of Achille Ratti, to the "grandeur of court" attainment. It was one he never was to attain in a similar role elaborate than the modest one of a town.

With the establishment of the new nunciature and the appointment of Archbishop Ratti to the post, the Holy See had taken a step in the direction of the recognition of the new republic. It was a step which was to be followed by the establishment of diplomatic relations between Poland and the Vatican.

GIRL About TOWN

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

A B. U. girl is getting the other side's view from a Nazi storm-trooper. A woman in western Massachusetts and another in Paris are exchanging ideas on china-painting. A twelve-year-older discovers that her Eskimo pen pal is an enthusiastic admirer of Shirley Temple. All of which should give you some inkling of the varied ideas exchanged by members of the International Friendship League.

When educators started the business of letter-writing on Mt. Vernon street, in 1931 as a means of arousing children's interest in geography and history, they scarcely thought it would assume present proportions. Today more than 74 countries are represented with five million and a half letters having been transferred in the last seven years.

The League keeps a list of prospective correspondents with their age, fitness and knowledge of English certified by ministers of education in their respective countries. Most range in age from 12 to 25 but of late adults have taken up the idea. Politics do creep into the letter-exchange but most popular subjects are hobbies, chiefly stamps and coin-collecting.

AUSTEN LAKE

Judge Fuchs Gets Back One of His 10,000 Beefsteaks

A BUNCH OF THE BEACON HILL BOYS are throwing a steak-fry to Judge Emil Fuchs, the ex-Braves' prexy and present head of the State Unemployment Commission. This, to my knowledge, is the first time anybody has given the Old Jedge a free meal, though, in his day, he tossed plenty to the baseball writers and certain politico-bar flies and social run-arounds.

AUSTEN LAKE

When he was flush the Old Jedge was a lavish spender who liked to give a food-folderol or furnish the ingredients for a massed brannigan, until his personal panic arrived and the Braves stockholders shut off his cash spigot. But until now none of the barnacled brotherhood ever gave back any of his beefsteaks.

I have written some sassy stuff about the Old Jedge in past years, especially when he was coaxing the greyhounds into his ball park and when, panicked by impending ruin, he did some strange didoes. But none can deny that he spent it when he had it, if that is any virtue, and he certainly belongs in Boston's museum of baseball curiosities.

Before his plug was pulled, I think the Jedge was actuated by an almost pathological generosity in spreading his feasts for whole hotelfuls of people, including some pretty sleazy nonentities and political ride-thumbers. And when he tumbled down, his bungles and busted pledges were induced by desperation and the horror of going broke, and his fair-weather fellowship drifted away.

* * *

Forgive Us Our Trespasses—

AT HEART THE OLD JEDGE WAS A very fair egg. There was the time when a Braves' office trusty was caught stealing large sums at the turnstiles and when I, among other reporters, came to cover the scandal for a journal other than this one. The Old Jedge came out of his office looking very haggard and spoke as follows:

"Now," said he, "this fellow was pretty good to you boys. We have just freaked a gun from his pocket. So don't write anything that would drive him to a rash act."

I recall it especially because on returning to my sheet I relayed the Jedge's wish to my hardshell city editor who snapped "Yeh? Did he think of shooting himself before he got caught? Write the news." Which, perforce, I did. I was younger then and would have less qualms about it now.

Nor did Fuchs prosecute the filcher, though the stolen sums were estimated at $50,000. And when collapse loomed he was often heard to moan that the vanished cash might have kept him solvent. Though I doubt it. Because the larger the income the freer the Judge a fritterings and the end might have been a little delayed, but much the same.

* * *

The Ghosts Will Walk

IT WILL BRING PLEASANT WHIFFS of the past to see the Old Jedge sitting behind the head table in his wide expanse of shirt front and puffing a red coal on the end of his cigar. It will review the ghostly regiments of his guests for whom, after feeding, he grabbed the check, which rumor said he paid out of the club's treasury against a good-will account. But we writers, cadgers and grifters were not ones to examine the motives of a gift horse and, I am sure, we gobbled his vittles and swallowed his vintages with a careless conscience and asked not whence these favors came.

There was a night in St. Petersburg many springs ago when he gathered 300 people, including Judge Landis, several operatic ladies, a covey of Federal statesmen and political no-goods, and made one of the elder baseball writers his guest of honor. Those were the happy, daffy days in the Southland when the Braves stopped at a waterfront palace where flunkies in horizon-blue and gold waited on your slightest wish and the players fed from menus long as your leg. What doth it boot now, if, as the club officials complained later, this grandeur hastened the ride to bankruptcy?

* * *

He Fed the Hungry Horde

THE MIDTOWN HOTEL WHERE THE BEACON HILL boys are giving Fuchs his steak-fry is the same one where the Jedge spread many a gargle-and-gobble for the sport staffs of Boston's nine dailies. Vaudeville turns, fresh from the downtown theaters used to troop in and whoop in never-ending sequences till the shell-pinks of dawn were in the outside sky. And still they came, after most of the guests had left and the never-go-homes were gathered in quarrelsome knots while the weary bar-keeps shook their mixtures and stirred their swizzle-sticks.

There was the night he gave a shindig to Babe Ruth one February when the Babe was still at his crest. The elite of the winter colony came, men and wives—the latter flashing nude shoulders above their colored satins and the former bulging immorally in their evening clothes. And at the top of the hilarity the Judge had tapped a water glass with a coffee spoon and began to extol the Babe's virtues till one doubted that this perfect person could be the big, sun-toasted mischief-maker whose prankie were woven into a smoke-house legend.

He Wanted More Tum-Tum

AND THE BABE, IN HIS TURN, had responded by firing extravegance back at the Judge, loving niceties that bounced off the walls in Babe's booming bass. Of course, neither the Judge nor the Babe could foresee that the time would come eventually when they were to be foes and smother and wind up by saying such things about each other as to curdle the liniments in the Braves' rubbing room.

And that time, too, when Fuchs was preparing for another banquet and, during the mornings, assembled a male chorus of newsmen and players to rehearse their songs. For, though the Judge was tone deaf and could carry a tune only in a droning monotone, he liked to drill his choir by waving a panatela cigar in time to their yowls.

The telephone had rung and the Jedge, shushing the musical yelps, had answered, "Yes . . . Mr. Guggenheim . . . That law case? . . . I am in the middle of an important conference . . . A lot of money. Yes, I know, but . . . Hello! Hello!

"I guess he hung up," the Judge had said, raising his panatella and requesting the choristers to start the verse again. "And a little more of that tum-tum by the basses," he said. Years later he confessed that the song rehearsal and loss of the Guggenheim business cost him a cool $25,000. Or so he said.

So, in time all the Jedge held dear fell away like last October's leaves and he drifted into the swirling mists of political patronage. His old intimates rarely see him now and then usually at some-body's testimonial function where he barges in with a red coal on his cigar and a plume of smoke trailing behind. But this will be his function and he will get back one of the several thousand steaks he has spread before his old, mocking army.

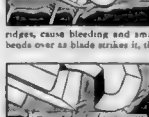
WHY MORE THAN A MILLION MEN (ALREADY) HAVE SWITCHED TO SCHICK INJECTOR RAZOR

OLD-STYLE SHAVE... The combing "teeth" of this razor guard are not designed to stretch the skin taut enough ahead of the blade edge—and have a tendency to "ridge" the skin surface. Blade can nick the top of ridges, cause bleeding and smarting. And, because whisker bends over as blade strikes it, the razor seems to "pull."

SCHICK INJECTOR SHAVE... Designed to flatten and stretch the skin, the Schick guide bar is mind, has no "teeth." Skin is stretched taut, giving a smooth shaving surface. Whiskers are held stiffly upright so blade can cut them cleanly at the skin line. Result: no nicks, no pull . . . even "against the grain."



Double-Thick Blades... Schick Blades are thick to save a sharper edge and hold it. Each blade individually honed, stropped, inspected before shaven per blade

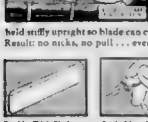
Automatic Blade Changer Lets the "engage" a pull and push-out shoots old blade, in goes a fresh one! No handling—no wrap, no screw-twist or reassembly.



A rinse and it's done! Save minutes every day. No need to wash and dry the Injector Razor after every shave . . . a flash under the faucet and it's ready to put away

LIFEBUOY SHAVING CREAM

For Toughest Beards — For Tenderest Skins

Lifebuoy's extra moist, soothing lather takes all the "rumph" out of wiry whiskers—because it soaks them soft. Grand for tender skins, too, because it's 20% milder than other leading shaving soaps. There are 120 to 150 smooth, clean, FRESH shaves in the big red tube.

ST PETERSBURG, Fla., March 23—The St. Louis Cardinals took today off at the behest of Manager Frankie Frisch, their first layoff in two and a half weeks. They lost 13 to 10 to the Boston Bees, yesterday.

LAREDO, Tex.—Manager Gabby Street called on Ed Linke, Jim Weaver and Jim Walkup for mound duty today as the St. Louis Browns squared off against the San Antonio Missions in the second game of a two game series. The Browns won their fifth straight yesterday, beating the Missions, 6 to 2.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Joe Kuhel, first sacker obtained from the Washington Senators, was to make his first appearance for the Chicago White Sox against the Chicago Cubs, today. Manager Charlie Grimm of the Cubs will pitch Larry French and Bill Lee against John Whitehead, Thornton Lee and Monty Stratton.

BILOXI, Miss.—Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Philadelphia Phillies ordered a long batting drill today. The phils, especially Morrie Arnovich, Emmet Mueller and Earle Brown, were weak at bat in yesterday's 3 to 0 defeat by the Memphis Chicks.

BATON ROUGE, La.—A gala celebration was scheduled for today's game between the Philadelphia Athletics and the New York Giants. Governor Richard Leche was on hand to make Connie Mack a colonel on his staff, and the other colonel, Will Terry, was eager for a victory over Connie's As who drubbed the Giants, 10 to 2, yesterday.

BRADENTON, Fla.—Billy Knickerbocker, utility infielder of the New York Yankees, is ready for action after a brief illness. The Yankees can use him. Frank Crosetti, the regular shortstop, is still on the sidelines, and Babe Dahlgren, who has been playing short, is not familiar with the position.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Goodwin Rosen, the Canadian who may take over the centerfield job for the Brooklyn Dodgers, has plenty of confidence in himself. An observer told him he'd probably start at center for the Dodgers when the season opens.

"Then," said Rosen, "they'll never get me out of there."

LAKELAND, Fla.—Owner Clary Griffith of the Washington Senators has gone to work to teach his pitchers some new tricks. They have given up 46 hits in four exhibition games.

LAFAYETTE, La.—The Indians get a look today at Bill Nowak, the rookie second baseman who went to the Giants in a contract muddle two weeks ago. Cleveland faces Jersey City with Nowak this year.

Joe Kuhel Makes Bow In Chisox Uniform

LAKELAND, Fla.—Mickey Cochrane is looking with fond eyes on the Detroit Tigers' new southpaw Harry Eisenstat.

"They'll have to hit this guy to beat him," Manager Mike said. "He won't be giving them those 1 and 0 on-balls hits." The Tigers picked up Eisenstat, a free agent, late last

Oriental Park Is Show Place | Touts Thrive On Banana Diet

—By JACK CONWAY—

HAVANA, Cuba, March 23.

THERE ARE numerous pleasant features about Lou Smith's Oriental Park, which is situated eight miles from the huge diamond in the center of the Capitol. In Havana all distances are measured from this diamond, which is worth $25,000. The stone would be too large for even Steve Casey, the Irish heavyweight wrestler, to carry around in a ring.

Mr. Boston

The approaches to Oriental Park are through streets lined with tropical trees. It is natural beauty, and entirely unlike Hialeah Park and Tropical Park, which have been placed in the center of artificial, hand-made settings.

The late John McGraw and the late Charley Stoneman contributed $1,000,000 to the building of Oriental Park. There were other partners who invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in this dream track.

Judge Landis decided it didn't sound just right for McGraw and Stoneman, the powers in the New York Giants at the time, to be financially interested in a race track, and they were obliged to dispose of their holdings at heavy losses.

Oriental Park has finally ended in the lap of the National City Bank of New York, and it is from that organization that Lou Smith leased the palatial property.

When the stock market crashed, banks found themselves owning things ranging from peanut stands to steel companies, and they picked up numerous race tracks and other sporting ventures.

The bankers, of course, would like to see Lou Smith make a success of Oriental Park, and take the place off their hands so that they will be able to devote more of their time to their bonds and to figuring interest rates and discounts.

There is every kind of a tropical tree at Oriental Park. I was most interested in the banana trees. The bunches of bananas start their growth inside of the trunk of the tree, and come out after ten months.

There must be at least 144 bananas on a bunch if they are to be sold to the New York market. There are freak bunches of bananas which run as high as 400, but they do not bring any more money than those that have only 144 bananas.

Lou Smith told me that some of the race track touts thrived living off bananas and pineapples when times got tough for them. There is at least no occasion for one going hungry at Oriental Park.

The clubhouse at Oriental Park makes the clubhouses of our New England tracks look ordinary. There are half a dozen three-room suites located in the upper part of the clubhouse. They were built originally to care for McGraw's many wealthy friends.

Officers of Oriental Park occupied them this season, and lived like millionaires even on those occasions when the mutuel handle was not so high.

The is a magnificent Casino located in the clubhouse. As I entered the Casino I was greeted by my friend Larry Tobin of Jamaica Plain. Larry was formerly associated with the swanky Embassy Cab in Miami, but early in the winter moved to the Cuban front.

Larry asked to be remembered to Jack Sharkey, Johnny Buckley, Attorney Frank Juggins and to Steve Mahoney. Larry was tanned by the Cuban sun, and looked as if he was enjoying his stay in Havana.

The society leaders of Havana gamble in the Casino. Saturday and Sunday are the big days for the social leaders to gather at the track.

The social leaders conduct special parties at Oriental Park on each Tuesday evening. At the most recent party the clubhouse was decked in roses. You can purchase roses for one cent a dozen here.

In addition to those used for decorations each person at the party, which was a costume ball, was presented with a basket of roses. At a signal, waves of roses were thrown in the air, and the place was converted into a garden of roses.

Social life is an important part of the activities in Cuba. The Spanish and Cuban people decided years ago that it is useless to work at top speed at all times and then go to the grave without having derived enjoyment out of life.

They are willing to do a certain amount of work in the city, and on their vast sugar cane plantations, but they also demand their share of social life.

I find that Americans with wealth drift easily into the easy way of living in Cuba. This is probably why many rich Americans have purchased magnificent homes here costing from $50,000 to $100,000, and then take part in the social life of this gay city.

The uncertainties that now face the world have also made many people with money anxious to enjoy it before something comes along to deprive them of it or to destroy part of its value.

Casino for Grandstand Patrons

THERE IS also a Casino under the grandstand where one may play any kind of a gambling game.

Cuba has not frowned on the slot machines, and this betting device will be found in the Casinos.

Many of the people who come to the track spend most of their time in the Casino. They may wager on an occasional race, but love best a betting game over a the whirl of the little ball on the roulette wheel often interests them more than a race between thoroughbred horses.

Those people who operate the Casino will tell you that nobody ever beats a betting game over a period of time.

By JOE CASHMAN

SEBRING, Fla., March 23—Charlie Wagner, the Minneapolis mute, will either strengthen or lose his No. 1 ranking among the Red Sox rookie pitchers here this afternoon when he struts his stuff against the Yankee Farmers representing the Newark Bears.

Charlie who'll share today's pitching assignment with "Lefty" Rogers, rates top billing among the kid flingers by virtue of holding the Dodgers to one single over a five inning stretch in his only previous appearance.

BAGBY SLIPS

The little righthanders edge over a couple of his youthful mates is all, however, that he'll have to be almost equally effective this p m to retires.

Emerson Dickman, for example, has gone nine innings in two efforts and allowed only three safeties. Dick Mckitrick has looked better than good in three different games.

Those three rookies are certainly living up to advance notices.

Jim Bagby was running neck and neck with them for a spell. In fact, he was out front up to a week ago, but he lost a little ground in each of his last two starts because of wildness.

His occasional failure to locate the plate first cost him a decision over the Bees and then permitted Louisville to tie the score in a game which the minor leaguers finally won 4 to 3 in the eleventh.

JUST WON'T HIT

Johnny Marcum, making a most favorable mound showing in his first start, yielded a rampage of cued one run and made another possible with a single, and the third tally wouldn't have mattered a bit for a single by Bagby.

These Newark Bears, champions of the minor league universe are expected to be one of the strongest [illegible] ever assembled outside the [illegible] loop.

BILL GRIMES

BRADENTON, Fla., March 23—Far too much importance is attached to the outcome of games played between major league clubs in the so-called Grapefruit League, which the various cities feature as extensively as though the clubs were battling for a pennant.

And the saddest and most distressing part of delusion is that too many managers are falling for this hokum.

There are eight major league squads training in Florida. It will cost each club approximately $25,000 for their sojourns in the Southland.

The primary objective of Southern training trips is to condition the players. But it requires thousands of dollars annually to defray the expenses of recruits.

It's not necessarily essential that veterans participate in many pre-season games. They've made the grade. They're known qualities. All any manager should require of his regulars is that they get in shape.

But, regardless of any recognized faculty as a judge of baseball talent, there never has been, nor will there ever be, a manager capable of passing along decisions on any rookie until such a time as the youngster has received ample opportunity to display his wares under fire.

A legion of special recruits are tried out every spring by major league clubs. These rookies have received mention of scouts by their success in minor leagues. They are usually .300 or better hitters.

But what have they been hitting against? Minor league pitching which is spotty, i. e., good about every third or fourth day.

Before they have passed muster with any major league club, they must undergo the acid test of facing big league pitching in regular games, not in batting practice.

ONE MANAGER, who enjoys the reputation of being one of the smartest and shrewdest in baseball, has never "cottoned" to recruits. He favors the old timers rating experience above ability.

Possibly he is acting in confidence of his ability to make selections but, at any rate, the records show that only ONE player, who broke in under him, has ever made the grade.

At this writing the Bees and Red Sox are holding up the Grapefruit League. Doubtless, thousands of the home town fans are running a fever over the outcome of games played down here.

Manager Casey Stengel is rapidly accumulating a working knowledge of his Bees. Right now, he is reserving judgment on most of his charges. He's not smart enough to out-fox a dumb unit, such a time as he sees on some major data pertaining to the Bees.

But during the short time he has been down here "Old Case" knows a few things. He's also a tireless patient worker and devotes hours every day to the youngsters. Some of the veterans admit they've learned more baseball under Stengel than they ever acquired in the past.

Stengel Only Experimenting

Now do not get the impression that Stengel laughs and jokes after his boys get smacked around down here. Far from it. But, I will say, in his defense, that after getting shellacked by Cincinnati and Spain, by Brooklyn, Stengel felt that even in defeat "Lief" Erickson and Max West had regained lost ground with him.

So, here's a lip to New England fans. Reserve judgment on the Bees and save on the Red Sox, until they go into action for the National and American League campaigns

Worcester Girl Chases Patty

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C., March 23 (AP)—Patty Berg of Minneapolis, Minn., the defending champion five-stroke lead in the tenth annual women's Mid-South Golf Tournament today as the field of 60 feminine stars began the second 18 holes of the 54 hole medal play test.

Miss Berg fired a sparkling 75 in the opening round to outdistance Jane Cothran Jameson of West Palm Beach, Fla., and Deborah Berry of Worcester, Mass., who tied for the runner-up slot with 81s.

Except for one disastrous hole, the 19th, where she required ten strokes, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, National Women's champion and defending mid-South titlist, would have been close on Miss Berg's heels. As it was she finished with an 83 and landed third position.

The narrow fairways and bunkered greens of the 6,200-yard layout provided stumbling blocks to many, and a number of scores soared over 100.

'If There's Kayoing To Do, I'll Do It,' Says Tony

By SAM COHEN

The condemned man ate a hearty meal and was enjoying a happy evening with the Last Mile.

If what you hear is true, the condemned man is Tony Shucco and the Last Mile a trip that starts from the corner into the center of the ring where he will meet Jack Fox in Boston Garden at the Boston Garden.

Jack is the slow moving, dusky veteran from Syracuse, Washington, who registered the only knockout in Lou Brouillard's fighting career and he is the same guy who has been named No. 1 challenger for the world's light heavyweight crown by the New York boxing commission.

MARVELOUS RECORD

Shucco was very confident and even those who've caught up with him today.

Instead of brooding over the impending disaster which is supposed to confront him tonight in Shucco, Tony has to say:

"Every fighter plays hunches. I guess mine are just as superstitious as any other athlete, and the fact that I will be on the short end of the odds tomorrow night is a POSITIVE sign I'll beat Fox.

"As a short ender I have scored the most outstanding victories of my career.

"Jack Sharkey, Al McCoy, Natie Brown, Jimmy Braddock, Maxie Rosenbloom, Lou Brouillard and a number of others were all favored to punch my head off but what actually happened was the complete reverse.

"Even Dan Carroll, my manager, is worried about the outcome of tomorrow night's battle but I'm not. In fact, I think I'll have a soft time beating Fox.

"Of course I realize Fox is a terrific puncher. I saw him knock out Brouillard and I, for one, didn't think anybody could do that.

"But Lou gave away too much weight and was hog fat himself trying to fight as a light-heavyweight. Then, too, he's the smartest fighter in the world and he made the mistake of standing up straight with his arms down low.

"I'll be just as heavy as Fox and a lot smarter than Brouillard. If there is any knockout tomorrow night, I'll bet my end of the purse Fox will be the one knocked out. I don't think he's so tough."

MALONEY VS. CUNNINGHAM

We'll that guarantees a great battle anyway, but our advice to Shucco is to consider the warning that have been given Fox because Fox is the most dangerous fighter in years.

Not only has he a de[illegible] punch, but he has a de[illegible] to end the unpleasant task he has undertaken. We hope he can be the fastest right hand weight in the business, if need be.

After the weekend [illegible] said has been arranged. In the [illegible] semi-final, Eric Seelbinder of South Boston, will meet with Walter Cunningham of Roxbury and a [illegible] Jimmy Malanes will be in [illegible] Dan's corner.

Haney Sees Fist Of 'Dictator' in TVA Upheaval

Roosevelt Seeking To Be 'Master,' Says Noted Expert

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, March 23 — Why has Mr. Roosevelt been in such a rush to act personally on the TVA business. Why was it proposed to have the federal trade commission make the investigation?

Why, then, doesn't he want Congress to investigate the TVA? Can it be because he hopes that when he orders Dr. Morgan out there will be a suit brought as in the Humphrey case, and that this will at least delay the investigation until after the November elections? It does not seem likely that Dr. Morgan or the supreme court are Senator Borg would sit by with his hands [illegible]

• • •

SEES DICTATOR HAND

Some may attribute Mr. Roosevelt's strange behavior to the blow he received when his illegal attempt to oust Humphrey out of the federal trade commission was overruled by the Supreme Court. He is the sort of hero who wants to [illegible] opponents that he in the [illegible] quarter. It quite from a speech of his.

It seems to me however that his [illegible] of power [illegible] with the [illegible] complex. And [illegible] of this [illegible] that [illegible] more accidents [illegible] a dictatorship [illegible] time we find [illegible] "reorganization" [illegible] the government [illegible] by such a reluctant Congress.

As it is we see that [illegible] new favorite device [illegible] changing. But the Roosevelt [illegible] laws are invading the realm [illegible] the states.

These things are all of one piece. They all are a [illegible] scheme to increase the power of the [illegible] at the expense of the states and to concentrate it in the federal government at the expense of [illegible]

• • •

In the TVA case the law Congress passed clearly [illegible] the organization provides that the members of the board [illegible] by the president with the consent of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

It does not give any power of removal to the President. He does not have any such power any more than he had in the Humphrey case.

STILL A DEMOCRACY

Now [illegible] Congress the proper [illegible] in the TVA and [illegible] is it to be the dictator of our [illegible] and [illegible] form of government. Then [illegible] a democracy?

After [illegible] whose TVA is it? For whom is Dr. Morgan acting? [illegible] what we are doing, what is the matter with the TVA [illegible] matter. I want to know. Mr. Roosevelt does not want to know.

The issue has great significance [illegible] new [illegible] to establish a basis for [illegible] Recovery will come when America [illegible] safe and [illegible] individual initiative and [illegible] operate or oppose.

Moreover, the whole great [illegible] industry is under a cloud of uncertainty and fear which is [illegible] by the TVA [illegible]

Even organized labor has come to see the danger that lies in Mr. Roosevelt's dictatorial tendencies. It has come out in opposition to his "government reorganization bill."

• • •

There must not be time to stop the bill, and the people of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut should at once deluge their senators with protests against it.

What Roosevelt is trying to do to Dr. Morgan, is what he will be doing to all our governmental agencies if we don't stop him. We stopped him when he tried to pack the Supreme Court. Why not now?

Under the New Deal, it is more true than ever that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Steel Pay Is Linked To Costs

Carnegie Workers in Move to Reduce Selling Prices

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Few orders, making for red ink, have brought wages into sharp focus in the steel industry. As in all depressions lowered costs are the goal of management and because wages represent such a large part of steel costs they bear the brunt of all attempts to reduce selling prices.

Stressing the subject is never because of labor. Employees of the Carnegie-Illinois Elwood, Indiana plant have offered to take a pay cut of 12 per cent. Naturally management sees in such a move an attempt by workers to improve buying. It is cooperation at the zenith, but that "elusive" thing called confidence should be forthcoming! Unless business men can be convinced that their lot is not an unhappy one they can hardly be expected to create a demand for steel, or anything else. Downward price cuts given as a bonus are important under such conditions.

There are some economists who maintain that lower prices, without concomitant reductions in wages, will build volume. And they are undoubtedly right. But the thesis of the motor industry has yet to be adopted by other principal heavy industries. For one thing there are just two directions in which pressure for lower costs can be applied: raw material and wages. The motor concerns use finished goods and it is easy to obtain lower prices from sellers, except in those rare periods when demand far outruns supply.

PAST HISTORY

Trying to beat the market, under the guise of investment, by regulating purchases by what has happened before still attracts attention. It is a pet dislike of ours and many times heretofore we have said that those who go blindly are flirting with losses. The latest, and most illogical, idea put forward is that in 1933 and again in 1935 the market looked about as it does now on charts. Both previous occasions preceded substantial opportunities for profit, so it is argued that another similar chance exists. That idea is not without a grain of inspection.

* * *

To begin with, 1933 and 1935 represented lulls in a bull market and it is logical to buy when such opportunities come along. Now we have a bear market and it isn't logical. If one missed the extreme low in 1932 it was only necessary to wait for the first lull and now it is just as wise to wait and deliberately miss the extreme low. Everybody may be, and buy the first dip following positive, undeniable proof that a new bull market is under way. This writer is an admitted chartist but he will never believe that charts are a substitute for thinking.

* * *

MARKET ACTION

The industrial section of the stock list has slipped under clearly defined resistance. The next stop is about 4 average points under Tuesday's close. To be exact the bear market low so far is 113.86 and if it is broken by the prescribed 1.01 a new leg of the decline is under way. We have little or no confidence in the structure of the market because a four time low has failed to show minor selling. It is all right to say that volume is small and therefore not indicative of a positive lower level but what is to support area of the prominence is violated it does not pay to let hope make one bullish.

Pastors Oppose Cafe Transfer

The Boston licensing board today had under advisement applications for a Sunday license and location transfer by Dorchester and Roxbury cafes, both opposed by clergymen.

John R. McVey, counsel for the Roberts Square Cafe on Norfolk road, Dorchester, declared clergymen "who run two beano games a week" have no right to oppose operation of a Sunday license. The cafe sought a Sunday license.

Transfer of a restaurant from 3 Dudley street, Roxbury, location to another spot on the same street was opposed by neighborhood clergymen, who told of men and women "staggering in the street."

McGrath Holds Party Post

Joseph McGrath, appointed new Boston customs collector by President Roosevelt, will keep his chairmanship of the Democratic state committee.

This was revealed today despite the general idea of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that federal appointees should not head political committees.

It was learned that the whole matter was threshed out in Washington before the appointment was made and that McGrath's supporters, including James Roosevelt and Senator Walsh, overcame Morgenthau's objections with the President.

Examination and consultation absolutely FREE to all who call before March 31st. The X-Ray and mercury quartz light treatments are accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description. No matter what your disease, Drs. Wood, J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

STOMACH ULCER
Mr. John A. Tyrell, 121 Dudley Street, Dorchester, had stomach ulcer since June, 1932. He heard of Dr. Walsh through a patient of Dr. Wood, who advised Mr. Tyrell to consult Dr. Walsh for his stomach ulcer. After acting upon this advice Mr. Tyrell was treated and cured of his stomach ulcer in 12½ days, according to his wife he has never had a return of the stomach ulcer since. Some six years ago, Mrs. Tyrell consulted Dr. Walsh about her stomach ailment and volunteered the above statement concerning her husband.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1938

+ For, lo, the winter is past, thrain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the timef the singing of birds is come.—Song of Solomon II, 12. +

The text for today is suggested by tRev. Palfrey Perkins, King's Chapel, Boston. The next text will be suggested by Bish Henry Knox Sherrill of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

The Editor Says:

THE three great state tyrannies of Europe began with something that bears a striking resemblance to what is going on in Washington today—

DELEGATION OF POWER.

Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini could not have absorbed the liberties of their peoples if powers that belonged to the people had not been transferred to a CENTRAL EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY.

The British-American Trade Conference, now in session in Washington, is, on our part, AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL BODY.

The Presidential power to make treaties must, according to the Constitution, be RATIFIED BY TWO-THIRDS OF THE SENATE.

All tariff legislation must ORIGINATE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Today treaties and tariffs are made WITHOUT THE CONSENT of either the Senate or House.

These powers have been delegated to the State Department by Congress in OPEN DEFIANCE of the Constitutional mandate.

THE AMERICAN BODY politic contains three great functional organs—the Executive, the Judicial and the Legislative.

The heart cannot do the work of the kidneys. The liver cannot do the work of the lungs. Yet that is exactly what we see being done in Washington.

DELEGATION OF POWER IS A DISTURBANCE OF FUNCTION.

The HEART of this nation is the Congress of the United States.

And this nation cannot last as a free democracy when the heartbeat is transferred to the White House, the State Department and irresponsible "commissions," "boards" and "conferences."

UNLESS CONGRESS comes to its senses we are headed FOR A EUROPEAN DICTATORSHIP RIGHT HERE IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

It was exactly in such manner that European dictatorships were formed.

KEEP CHURCHES FREE

"Be honest, be fair, be just with your fellow man; that is the freedom which comes of great and true religion, the freedom that is American."—The Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds of St. Matthew's Church, Dorchester, in address to 450 Massachusetts religious leaders attending the 10th anniversary session of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

America has become great among the world's nations because our government has always been honest and fair with every denomination.

Our long history is the story of a CONSTANT and SUCCESSFUL opposition to the suspicions, hatreds and intolerance that have ravaged other countries.

Here, every man is free and equal, able to worship his God according to the dictates of his heart and conscience.

We ask not that he belong to a designated church or conform to a specified ritual. WE ASK ONLY THAT HE BE A LOYAL AND LAW-ABIDING AMERICAN.

That has always been and will ever be our greatest national asset—greater even than the rich territory we occupy, vastly greater than the billions in gold that have come to our shores.

MASSACHUSETTS RELIGIOUS LEADERS who attended the Boston City Club session of the National Conference of Jews and Christians deserve praise.

They give the substance of ineradicable FACT to Mr. Hearst's recent assertion that "TRUE RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IS FOUND ONLY IN DEMOCRACY."

They provide proof anew of the wisdom contained in his remarkable editorial calling on all churches to unite in brotherhood "TO KEEP THE NATION DEMOCRATIC AND THE CHURCHES FREE."

LET'S BUILD HIGHWAYS

"Enemies of gasoline tax diversion laid final plans today for their fight before a legislative committee to make all revenue from motor vehicles available for highway purposes."—News Item.

The purpose of the gasoline tax has always been to provide better and safer highways for Massachusetts.

Our people never consented to the use of millions of the money to balance lop-sided State budgets, to pay officials' salaries and to finance activities not even remotely connected with roads.

Consequently the annual diversion of vast sums of highway funds ought to stop. Motorists must receive the improvements they have every right in the world to expect.

Big "Jack" Horner -:- By Nelson Harding

With America embarked upon a patriotic and necessary national defense program—necessary to guard our peace and security—politicians at Washington ought to be looking for economies wherever economies are to be found.

By severe pressure on the Departments, impounding 10 per cent of unexpended appropriations, the President did a good deal along that line.

But he has had no backing.

The Voice of New York -:- By Louis Sobol

I ALMOST bought an oil painting for the living room, but the dealer insisted stubbornly that $28 was a reasonable price for a three-by-five and I just as stubbornly balked at paying more than $22 because I was convinced there was not more than $15 worth of oil-colors in the entire scene. I did not like the frame at all. Temporarily, we have no painting in our house.

I should not have mentioned it at all if the dealer hadn't told me about a recent experience in which a rival collector figured.

In a small second-hand store near Florence the latter came across a dust-covered miniature which close inspection convinced him must be a genuine Titian. After haggling with the dealer, he bought it for the ridiculous sum of 300 lira. His problem was how to take it to America without letting the customs men know he was bringing in a precious masterpiece.

So he had a portrait of himself painted over the original. Back in New York, he sent it to a restorer. The collector has been acting strangely since. For, when the miniature was returned to him—not only was it cleansed of his own portrait—but of the Titian masterpiece as well!

The restoration had been too thorough—and what he now has in his possession is a militant head of Mussolini—glowing like—pardon me, please—the very Il Duce!

Briefics: Bette Davis is a tie-collector—her prizes being something in blue and red once worn by President Roosevelt—another, plain gray, once worn by Lindbergh . . . Alec Woollcott, besides being an amateur actor, is a dilettante criminologist . . .

City Editor Amster Spiro, who once held four jacks against my ace-high flush, is now the manufacturer of a fast-selling game known as Auto-Bridge . . . Recently, he formed a merger with Bridge Expert Ely Culbertson, taking over the Bridge World and Games Digest, which Culbertson and his former wife, Josephine, will continue to edit . . .

George M. Cohan, who, according to legend, wrote his famous war song, "Over There," in ten minutes, was dared to duplicate the feat a few days ago . . . Cohan tried—but gave up, sighing, "I must have been much younger then" . . .

Our esteemed innkeeper, Sherman Billingsley, of the Stork Club, recently in a moment of passionate impulse, dictated an order to his employes, from headwaiter to dish-washer, urging them hereafter to address him intimately and affectionately as "Sherman." With much trepidation, they await the next official communique, which undoubtedly will command, "Please call me 'Toots' "!

In Central Park, up near 100th street, is the city's conception of how a heavenly garden spot should be—and, in fact, our city gentlemen have done very well, for here there is beauty on formal lines.

Glorious yews form an impressive border and there is a carpet of inviting green lawn which will shortly have a background of rare blossoms. Yet, few, save inmates from a home for the aged a block or so away, ever come here to contemplate or to drink in the serene beauty. And, night and day, there is a cop on guard.

At night especially is there strict vigilance, for in the hills and brush section behind, rival gangs assemble and often there is a stabbing. Once a young Porto Rican was horribly beaten and dragged down to this garden spot, where he was left, a bleeding mess.

"This garden," commented the good-natured gendarme to whom I spoke, "is too good for people."

I am one of those who have been tempted always to get up in front of a band and direct. There is no courage in me—and never quite enough brandy.

Aged Edward T. Stotesbury has no such inhibitions—and neither has the young pugilistic Tony Canzoneri. And only last week I watched Curt Reisinger, whose mama has a controlling interest in Anheuser-Busch, step in front of the Gerry Morton band at the Savoy-Plaza lounge and wave a baton.

He wore a red shirt, red tie and tweed suit. I have learned this 50-year-old heir to millions has a special baton which the head-waiter keeps and hands to him as soon as he makes one of his periodic visits to the hotel's lounge.

The Marry-Go-Round -:- By Helen Rowland

A happy marriage is an altar on which a woman cheerfully sacrifices her independence, her comfort and most of her vanity, and a man cheerfully lays down his freedom, his self-indulgence and most of his ego.

If you are already wedded to your ambitions, your habits or your prejudices, don't marry anyone—man or woman—because that is the worst form of bigamy.

Most people spend half the courtship in telling each other how perfectly wonderful they are—and the other half, planning to remodel each other after the wedding.

Self-expression and rugged individualism may be all right in their place, but you can't run them through a wedding-ring or make them fit into a two-room-and-kitchenette apartment.

No use trying to tame a wild animal or a wild husband, once either of them has discovered that he can call your bluff and get away with it.

Many a marriage has withstood the undertow of poverty for years—and then, been all washed up on a wave of prosperity.

Long-distance marriage is like perpetual motion. Theoretically it is perfect, but it has one drawback.

Human Side of the News -:- By Edwin C. Hill

WHEN Arnold Rothstein was murdered, presumably because of a gambling dispute, he was supposed to be worth $1,000,000. The Surrogate Court reports that the murdered gambler's estate shows no assets whatever.

Gamblers and racketeers usually are supposed to "have a bone buried" somewhere. They usually haven't, or if they have some other gangster digs it up. That happened in Edward Robinson's film, "The Last Gangster." It was both good theater and good reporting.

There's an old saying that money you get that way does you no good. The aged kidnaper of the Cudahy boy was around New York for years, cadging a nickel for a bowl of soup or a dime for a Bowery bed.

Consider the financial rating of all our major picaroons, on down through Big Jack Zelig, Gyp the Blood, Lefty Louey, Monk Eastman, Dopey Bennie and all the rest. Those who escaped death, at the hands of their business associates or in the chair, were never able to hold their loot.

Jack Black, reformed burglar and protege of the late Fremont Older, wrote a book, "You Can't Win." It was not a moral treatise on crime, but rather an account of the financial limitations and hazards of the business.

It ought to be required reading for any lad suffering from the easy-money itch. Black's main theme was that a criminal was stupid to dare so much, work so hard, get so little and fade out as a convict or a beggar.

I encountered the other day an extraordinary teacher of music. By making musicians knock off playing, she lands them in symphony orchestras.

She is Miss Kemp Stillings, of Boston antecedents, trained near European masters and evolving her own unique system. Within the last year, her pupils have crashed symphony orchestras in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Dallas and New York.

Her idea, roughly, is this: Music aspires to translate life into art. The trouble with many musicians, although they may have magnificent technical skill, is that they have no life to translate, nothing to express.

She sends them out to live, to observe, to adventure—until something boils up that must find fiery, fervent, subtle or dominant expressions. Then she sends them back to their piano, 'cello or violin.

She thinks no man can be an artist who allows his five senses to atrophy. The raw material of great literature and art lies around loose in this big bustling world.

So many of these little theater movements and butcher paper magazines are mere artistic cannibalism, stale, barren and fruitless.

At the New York World's Fair in 1939, there will be a beautiful non-sectarian Temple of Faith, to be built with funds provided by all religious denominations.

That is interesting, in an exposition designed to foreshadow "the world of tomorrow." Suspicion, not faith, is dominating the world. Religion is on the defensive in many countries.

Here is an assertion of unity and tolerance in an hour of dark distrust, an hour when an assertion of belief in our civilization, a statement of cosmic significance and high destiny for mankind, is needed.

The Temple of Faith will be gleaming white, in a setting of lovely verdure, like the towers of Camelot which inspired King Arthur in hours of peril. Great expositions have lacked inspiring symbols. This may be an exception.

Grover Whalen has a way of doing interesting, surprising things. He put New York's policemen in blue shirts and they loved him for it.

The Political Parade -:- By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, March 23.

IT has turned out that having those 700 economic dwarfs come to town to see Snow White Dan Roper wasn't such a smart idea, after all.

The pygmies stuck around Washington long enough to absorb a lot of cocktails, local color, and atmosphere, and they haven't been the same since.

The atmosphere of Washington being 99.44 per cent pure politics, the Little Business Men upon returning home have gone into politics themselves, and the way they are telling it to their Senators and Congressmen now has set most of our noble statesmen back three weeks in their correspondence.

The burden of the new marching song from the sticks is that Little Business is going into politics. Some are even planning to run for Congress, although this takes money, organization, and what Hog Island used to call the "know how." So there won't be many candidates in the final show-down.

But Little Business is going into practical politics in the approaching campaign. They are dissatisfied and—what throws a chill into many a congressional heart—they want a change! And change, to a sitting Congressman or Senator is just as welcome as arsenic in the soup.

Most of these Little Business Men supported Mr. Roosevelt and the whole Democratic ticket in 1932. Very nearly all of them stuck in 1936. They included Republicans as well as Democrats.

You may figure Roosevelt's huge majorities in many ways, and one way discloses that these Little Business Men probably held the political balance of power in the last two Presidential elections.

Old-stagers around the Capitol, sensing the widespread political discontent growing out of the futile manner in which the House handled the tax bill, say that this is the first time since 1932 that small and medium business has been viewing the Washington scene in a spirit of cold-blooded analysis, instead of emotionally.

There is a decidedly humorous side to the feud that has broken out between Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and State Department.

She has caused Mr. Hull more trouble over his reciprocity treaties than all the men in the House put together. She blocked the treaty with Czechoslovakia so long that she probably delayed its consummation for several weeks. She now requests Mr. Hull to remove Mr. Grady, of the Tariff Commission, as chairman of the committee that is sitting in the British treaty hearings. The lady charges him with prejudice and unfairness.

But here's the humor of it—she is a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and in that capacity the State Department leans on her heavily. It has hardly got through thanking her yet for her efforts to block the Ludlow War Referendum Resolution.

March of Events -:- By Benjamin DeCasseres

I DIFFER politically in many matters with President Roosevelt, but there is one subject on which we could hold a perfect love-feast: That is our mutual admiration for the literary quality and sublime spirit of the Psalms.

Recently the President quoted to newspapermen the Fifteenth Psalm, wherein, you will recall, that he is fair in the sight of the Lord who "backbiteth not with his tongue."

While the President was performing for all of us this service I wish he had picked from the Thirty-Fourth Psalm this admonition for Brother Bob Jackson:

And this from the Fifty-First Psalm for Brother Ickes:

"The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart."

What the motives of Premier Chamberlain were in bowing to Mussolini I do not know, but this is as clear to me as rock-water:

I do not like Mussolini or his Fascism—but I know when a man who is, from my standpoint, nearly always one hundred per cent wrong is sometimes one hundred per cent right: The Mediterranean is Afro-Latin water.

That genial and human old cynic, Benjamin Franklin, said:

Napoleon said:

"There are two levers for moving men—interest and fear."

William Cobbett said:

There, in those three sayings, is the union of cynicism and instantly recognizable truths. They are beyond contradiction or argument.

Out of tons and tons of pitchblende and uranium oxide Madame Curie found tiny quantities of the magical substance (if it is a "substance") called radium.

In the ore of our inner life—our common place and every-day emotions and thoughts—there are buried tiny magical rays. It is called intelligence.

Intelligence is the radium of the inner life. It is buried in us all. And when you have extracted it, like Madame Curie extracted it from dirt and silt, you have the light of the world—INTELLECT.
